

The Sports Mill

By Bob Miller

"Secret" is the pass word that must be given to get into Oklahoma's practice sessions these days. Since Dewey "Snorter" Luster took over down at the Sooner stronghold gates have been tightly locked and guarded lest some information of what is going on should get to alien ears.

Reports that have slipped by Oklahoma censorship indicate that the Sooner team will use a great deal of trickery in their offense this season. Deception will be uppermost and will feature at least three backs carrying a fake on every play.

This system seems to have several good features, but at the same time, a major disadvantage creeps in. True that of three backs explode through the line pretending to have the ball and carry the fake well into the secondary there will be plenty of deception. And deception is good.

But, while these three backs are slipping thru the opposing line, that leaves one back to do some blocking. In every backfield on nearly every play there are at least two backs blocking and in most cases three. It seems to me that what the Sooners are sacrificing in the interest of deception is not fully compensated for by the deception gained.

The Sooner seniors are having a hard time keeping their positions from the sophomores who are catching on to the new trickery at a swift pace. Eddie Davis from Muskogee is billed as the most gifted ball-hider on the squad along with Junior Golding. Carl Brewington and Bill Mattox, the junior of the last three named. Look for these names a little later in the season.

Husks... Al Zikmund is having a hard time this fall. Al had a crew cut and since he is blonde, the sun is playing havoc with his scalp. Sunburn you know. In yesterday morning's practice session he pulled a muscle in his leg when he stepped on small Kenny Simmons. It was the same leg that was broken in last year's Rose Bowl get-together; Kenny wasn't injured on the mix-up however.

During the Friday afternoon drill period a huge cheer rose from the vicinity in which the linemen were having blocking drill. Reason for the ovation was Francis Liek who rammed one of the tougher pieces of blocking equipment and snapped off the steel reinforcement. The piece of equipment has been moved to the sidelines to... recover.
