

Nebraskans Are Trekking To Class Again . . .

Organizing Advisory Committee . . .

Regents, Legislature Initiate Nebraska Chemurgy Project

. . . With 74 Outstate Men

Invitations have been sent to 74 Nebraska men representing various interests in the state to form an advisory committee for the newly formed chemurgy project which has been set up by the board of regents and the legislature.

The project, headed by Dr. Lee L. Christensen, is to discover what Nebraska farm products can be utilized into profitable industries. Working primarily with plastics and synthesized products, the Nebraska chemurgists are mainly interested in the possible use of Nebraska's grain sorghums in the starch and fermentation industries.

Included in the survey will be an examination of the needs of the defense program in order to determine what kind of industries can work successfully in the state and what other states climatically and agriculturally the same, are doing in this field.

The committee is composed of men representing the various industries in Nebraska who will, through correspondence, relay information pertinent to the project to the executive committee headed by C. Y. Thompson of West Point, university regent.

Thompson stated, "It is especially desirable that the advisory committee members forward to the chemurgy project office all the suggestions they may have about the scope of the work undertaken. In this way the program may be made of the greatest use to the people of the state."

A permanent office with laboratory facilities is now occupied by Dr. Christensen in experiment station hall on ag campus. Dr. Christensen is a recognized leader in chemurgy both in the university and industrial fields. He was granted a leave of absence from the University of Idaho, where he is chairman of the department of agriculture chemistry, to do research here.

Other members of the executive committee appointed by the board of regents are: Senator John S. Callan of Odell, president of the legislative council; Chet G. Marshall of Arlington, president of the Nebraska Progress association; Carlyle Hodgkin of Lincoln, farm editor for the Omaha World-Herald; and Frank Robinson, Kearney stockman. Dr. Christensen is executive secretary for this committee.

The stated purpose of the special appropriation provided by the 55 legislature of Nebraska in L. B. 462 was "To provide for research into the use of agricultural products and by-products as raw chem-urgy fund to be used under the direction of the board of regents. The advisory committee which will aid the executive committee may be enlarged as the work progresses to provide the representation necessary for a sound action program.
