We Hear Another Call to Students

In an inspiring speech to 515 sorority women and housemothers at Iowa State college, Dean Maria Leonard of the University of Illinois emphasized the importance of young people in assuming responsibility in these "dark days of a gifted age."

Miss Leonard's talk, "Today's Call to the American College Girl," stressed the importance of American college women. She said they must perfect their talents so that they may best serve their country and fellowmen.

"This is the pity of the present war," she said. "Aside from the millions of lives being lost, the visible longings of man created in cathedrals and other edifices through the ages have been destroyed."

"This is a wonderful world in which we live. We can fly like birds; with submarines we can swim in seas like fish. We can speak around the world in 14 seconds. We can buy the morning paper on the streets the night before."

We have said it before. We will say it again and so will the nation's leaders. The students of today must make the most of their education so they can make the most of their part in "keeping this a wonderful world."

Behind the News By David Thompson

Panama Purge

Another Latin-American nation joined the ranks of those actively opposing the Axis when little Panama indulged in a bloodless purge and overthrew the pro-Fascist government of President Dr. Arnulfo Arias and replaced it with the pro-American Ernesto Jaen Guardia, formerly Second Vice President of the Republic.

The coup d'etat had been brewing for some time apparently but was brought to a head by Dr. Arias' refusal to allow the arming of vessels flying the Panamanian flag. The revolution was as swift as it was startling and met with immediate popular approval indicative of the rising pro-American sentiments of the Western Hemisphere nations.

The most important effect of the change of government of course is that it will counteract the loss in prestige of the U. S. that resulted from the refusal of the Arias regime to arm Panamanian merchant vessels operating between the Americas and England, and will restore the harmony in Hemisphere relations.

A second affect of the coup d'etat was to relieve the pressure on the neutrality revision procedure advocated by the administration. Inasmuch as one of the reasons for the change in administration in Panama was the refusal of Arias to arm their vessels, it seems quite obvious that the new regime will reverse this, and thus make unnecessary for our government to change the provisions of the neutrality act of 1929 which prohibit ships bearing the U. S. flag from entering belligerent ports and designated combat areas.

Take This to The Rally!
