By Bob Miller

A new feature has been added to the sports section of the Daily Nebraskan for football season. ... Appearing today and every week after throughout the Husker's season Dennis Bruner will draw the outstanding personalities on the team...

A Bizad sophomore, Bruner draws from photographs of the players and achieves amazing likenesses of his subjects... It looks like he has something there... But definitely...

With the announcement that Freddie Meier would captain the moving Cornhuskers this week against Indiana's team for homecoming, memories return... Last year Fred, then playing behind Bob Burruss was in charge at the pivot spot during the Oklahoma game...

FRED MEIER - Lincoln Journal. Lined up for the play that everyone was waiting for...

The ball was snapped and out of the middle emerged Fred, goalward bound... He made it down to the Oklahoma one before he was stopped... The play was a center-around and did it set the sports scribblers dizzy... Francis took it the last yard for the score, however... Meier has two major letters to his credit. He weighs 190 and stands 5-10...

At last it has been solved...

Howard Debus, "The Human Howitzer," did bruise his back and it was in the game Saturday... Chintz Herndon, the casualty, has a bad shoulder but the coaches' usual, "At full strength by Saturday" was hung out...

CLARENCE HERNDON - Lincoln Journal.

Sometime during every football player's life, this question comes to him, "Is football worth all of this?" Well, it was worth a lot to Tommy Harmon, Michigan All-Everything from last year. He has decided to try professional ball... four games worth this season... For these games he will be paid $6,250... That amounts to $1,562.25 per game and $260.37 per minute... And he won't play every minute of all four games in all probability...

Harry Hopp, last year a Husker Luminary, was one of the stars Sunday in the Detroit Lions-Cleveland Rams pro game. He crossed the goal for one touchdown and drove thru the opponents line repeatedly for gains... Lloyd Cardwell, another former Husker, got his leg broken in the same contest...

Soph Touted By Hoosiers

B. Hillenbrand Assumes Role of Triple-Threat

With Nebraska holding a three pound weight edge over Indiana, Huskers and Hoosiers alike plunged into the last few days of practice preceding Nebraska's homecoming game Saturday.

According to reports of Scouts Paul Amen and Lewandowski who have witnessed the Indiana team in action against both Detroit and Texas Christian, the Hoosiers were merely victims of bad breaks in both contests.

Sophomore Star.

Billy Hillenbrand, sophomore backfield star, will be the big name on the lips of Nebraska fans if the 190 pound quarterback lives up to his advance notices and in the opinion of the scouts, he has the goods to live up to these build-ups.

Hillenbrand was picked by Francis Wallace as the back of the year, starting into his sophomore season. Billy is able to put a scare into opposing coaches since he is as good at lugging the ball as tossing it through the ether waves.

Nothing Stops Hoosiers.

News that assures that a lively game will be in the offing Saturday is substantiated by the fact that Indiana disregarding a wet practice field stayed out for two hours perfecting offensive maneuvers. Everyone is pointing toward Nebraska as the best way to observe the Hoosiers' determination not to make the long trip in vain.

Coach Bo McMillin is through worrying about adding new plays to the Hoosier repertoire but is putting in the week perfecting the timing on the plays that they now have.

Games Close.

During the five years in which relations have been continued between the two schools, the games have always been close. It seems that Indiana is determined to win this game every year regardless of any others. In 1936, Nebraska won again 7-0. For the next two years in succession, the games ended in ties 0-0 and 7-7, respectively.

Last year the Huskers won 13-7, to prove that even a Rose Bowl team can be pushed and hard. The seven points in '37 proved to be the largest margin. So, watch out on Saturday. Homecoming, Indiana and Cornhusker spirit should combine to produce a classic.
