Still time to Buy

Today is the last day that Tassels and Corn Cobs, members of the campus defense committee and the Union office will sell tickets to the movie, "A Yank in the RAF," that will give the British War Relief Society of Lincoln revenue to carry on its work. Tickets are being sold for 44 cents, of which ten cents goes to the society, if sold before the theatre box office opens.

Students have responded well to the sale of these tickets, but we hope a great many more will be sold today. The more money the Lincoln group has to carry on its local projects the more can be done to alleviate the suffering and needy of Britain during the war. According to the report of the society, the New York headquarters has sent cash and supplies abroad to air-raid victims, to families of soldiers, sailors and airmen, to families of men in the merchant marine and the life saving service, to refugees, evacuees and orphans. American business men in London have used part of the British War Relief funds to keep up and operate a fleet of 106 ambulances, 54 mobile surgical units, 50 first aid vans and 50 personnel wagons. These are only some of the projects being carried on, but every ticket sold for the movie here in Lincoln helps the general society.

Behind the News

How Many More?

Another American owned ship flying the Panamanian flag has been sunk off Iceland. This time it was the Bold Venture, sunk south and west of Iceland and clearly within the defense zone set up by both factions in the war situation. That coupled with the crippling of the destroyer Kearny indicates the difficulty of protecting ships at sea from subsea raiders.

We have long been wondering why Britain has lost so many ships in this war, and we have been prone to blame it upon the inefficiency of the British convoy system. Now it seems that we cannot even protect Western Hemisphere vessels with our own navy on patrol within a section of the Atlantic much farther from the Axis submarine bases. At least we cannot do so if those vessels are not provided with armament of their own with which to hold off the raider until help can reach them.

The fact that the Bold Venture was flying the flag of Panama makes little difference even to Americans who discriminate between American owned ships and ships flying the American flag in belligerent zones since it was sunk in a zone this side of Iceland clearly within our defensive waters.

How many such sinkings are the people of the U. S. going to stand for? They come closer to our front door every day. They are Hitler's answer to our "shoot on sight" policy. They are ships bearing supplies to American troops stationed in Iceland. The answer to the above question is not easy to decide. If the trend of public opinion from outright isolation in September 1939 to "aid to Britain and Russia" in 1941 continues at the same rate as it has, it means that the U. S. will sooner or later become completely involved in this war.

If the U. S. enters this war it is automatically committing itself to a policy of internationalism, a policy of enforcing the peace that will result from the defeat of Hitler. Perhaps if that had been done at the end of the last war, the present crisis would not be facing us today. If however the same reaction against such an internationalistic policy on the part of the U. S. follows this war, our entrance into the war would have been almost futile. This consideration cannot be stressed too much. It is a decision that should be reached before we enter the war, if we do enter, and not after the war is over.

and masters will be here to get some new slants on education; to meet old friends; to hear amusing and outstanding speakers; to have fun; and to buy some new clothes. We want to welcome these people, many of them former University of Nebraska students, and we wish them a profitable and interesting three-day training period.

Helen Kelley Gets Position On Nebraskan

Helen Kelly, now society editor, officially joined the editorial staff of the Daily yesterday following her appointment as news editor by the Publications board.

Miss Kelley will fill the position vacated by Randall Pratt, who resigned from his work when he was found overpointed by the men's activity point board. The new staff member was chosen from five Nebraskan reporters who filed for the position.

Anemic students, who may miss being called upon because they are upperclassmen, but who wish to take the opportunity of the experiment, should go to Dr. Warner and ask to be referred.

Rundin Appoints Committees For Kosmet Klub Fall Revue

Committees for the Kosmet Klub's annual fall revue Nov. 20 were announced today by Walt Rundin, president. The show, composed of skits by sororities, fraternities and other organized groups, will be held in a downtown theatre.

Committees are: Scenery, co-chairmen Hugh Wilkins and Bob Gelwick, Max Whittaker and Frank White; properties, Dick Harnsberger, Max Laughlin, and Bob Shoemaker; tickets, Jack Stewart; publicity, Ed Calhoun and Bob Schlater.

Other committees are: Advertising, Hugh Wilkins; tryouts, Walt Rundin, chairman, Bert Smith, and Jack Stewart; programs, Hugh Wilkins, chairman, and Max Laughlin; ushers, Dick Harnsberger.

Letters were sent to fraternities, sororities and organized houses this week to give them plenty of time to prepare a skit for the show. Tryouts will take place late this month.

The revue will be staged Thursday night, instead of on a Saturday, because of conflicts.

fed vitamin and protein supplements with their food as a treatment for the anemia. Quite some progress was made which means even greater expectations this year using the special vitamins capsules.

This year other phases of research will be carried on by the department, but all will be directed toward the nutritional status of college women. Dr. Leverton claims the food intake, and the amount of vitamins and minerals one acquires, make a noted difference in the appearance and actions of the individual, and it is the department's problem at present, to find out just what the active college coed needs.

The experiments on anemia will begin as soon as Dr. Warner of the health service refers anemic women students who are willing to cooperate with Dr. Leverton.
