

Ginsburg States Study of Roman Law Valuable

"Knowledge of Roman law is a necessity for a thorough understanding of American law," according to Dr. Ginsburg, of the Classics Department, who spoke to the Young Advocates Tuesday.

Dr. Ginsburg, an authority on Roman law, asserted that although our legal system is not of the Roman type, many of its basic fundamentals, especially in equity law, are derived from the Roman law. In line with this, Dr. Ginsburg suggested that a course in Roman law be required for all Nebraska law students, as it is at Columbia university.

Utah Prof Preserves Works Of Shakespeare in Volumes

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah. (ACP). The original words of William Shakespeare, endangered in their English resting place by German bombers, are preserved by the long labors of a professor who started reading the Bard of Avon at the age of nine.

Dr. B. Boland Lewis of the University of Utah has reproduced in two volumes the 276 known documents written by the great English dramatist.

Behind this publication are some 500 photographic plates of genuine and questionable Shakespeare manuscripts. British scholars have asked Dr. Lewis to preserve his photographic plates—believed to be the only duplication of the English originals.

About half the original Shakespeare documents are in England. When war clouds gathered, British scholars secreted the manuscripts in underground vaults.

"I have received direct information from England," Dr. Lewis says, "that some of those vaults have been penetrated by bombs. My photographic plates some day may be the only available source for reproduction of the documents."

Among the documents preserved by Dr. Lewis is Shakespeare's deathbed letter, on which the handwriting grew less and less legible until the signature was a mere scribble.

How Much Does Papa Pay?

Reporter Queries Students

By Lloydene Kershaw.

Actually, just now much drain is there on papas purse to send Susie or Junior to college for a year? In a cross-section of students, both affiliated and unaffiliated, we tried to answer this pertinent and timely question. The results were truly amazing, revealing that there is just as much difference in the living expenses of the students at Nebraska as in the homes from which they come.

But let's get down to facts and statistics: Consider the coeds and what it costs them (or papa to be more accurate) to keep beautiful. If the varying amounts spent are any indication of how pulchritudinous or socially successful a gal is, some of the lassies with limited means just don't stand a chance.

The sum spent for clothes by Nebraska coeds interviewed, to be specific, varies from an estimated $75 per year to $575. It seems upon a little closer investigation, however, that the average amount is between 175 and 225 dollars.

$36 for Cosmetics.

Still considering the women, items which varied considerably among the ten interviewed were cosmetics, and amusement. The high amount spent for cosmetics was $36 for the school year while one girl interviewed declared that she spends only $2 a year for them. Interesting to note is the fact that the sums spent by Nebraska women in beauty shops is negligible, as most of them wash and fix their own hair. According to national surveys this is not true of women over the nation. For amusement, too, the amounts spent varied considerably, ranging from a low of $2 a month to a high of $20.

Only one of the ten women contacted owned a car, which costs her approximately $50 to maintain and operate from September to June. On the whole, sorority girls spend more than unaffiliated girls, particularly for clothes and amusement. Of the ten girls questioned, six smoked and four were non-smokers. The average girl smoker spends, it would seem, from $28 to $35 for cigarettes during the school year. The amount spent for board and room among girls who do not live at home varies from $25 (unaffiliated) to $46 (affiliated). This is somewhat misleading, tho, because the $46 includes sorority dues and expenses as well.

Men Less Clothes Conscious.

The most striking difference between expenditures by the men and women was in the amounts spent for clothes. The most spent for clothes by any fellow interviewed was $150 with the majority spending from $75 to a $100; the lowest amount spent was $50. Compare that with the figures for the gals! Every girl but one spent $100 or more (four of the ten spent more than $300) whereas only four of the mens' clothes expenses exceeded $100. Do you suppose it's the "cords" that make the difference?

Room and board was approximately the same for both sexes, as were tuition, books, and cleaning bills. Books averaged $20 for the year and tuition about $100.

A special case, among those interviewed is the photographic fiend who confessed that he spent $800 for cameras and equipment last year, but stated that he was going to keep it within $200 this year. Incidentally, he spends $18 a year for camera insurance but doesn't have life insurance!

Naturally men spend a great deal more for amusement than women, but the amounts spent by the individual fellows showed quite a bit of variation. One fellow who works nights and has practically no dates estimated the amount he spends for amusement at $2 a month, while at the other end of the scale was the fellow who spends $200 in nine months, which is ten times as much! The average seemed to be approximately $12 per month.

Of the 20 students, ten had some earnings of their own to ease the financial strain on their families—seven of the ten men and three of the women. The average amount earned was between 20 and 25 dollars per month, although three (one woman and two men) earned between $32 and $35.

Papa Who Pays.

Finally, the highest amount spent for the whole year was by an affiliated girl (no earnings) who spends slightly over $1,300 of her father's hard-earned cash, and the minimum was by an unaffiliated girl who lives in Lincoln (consequently no rent—most of board, however) who spends approximately $375 and earns $290 of that by outside work.

A conclusion? Students can spend almost as little or as much as they like to attend school, and, judging from the statistics, it seems they do!

Livestock Judging Team Wins Place at American Royal Show

. . . In Kansas City

The livestock judging team won eighth place last Saturday at the collegiate contest which was a feature of the American Royal livestock show in Kansas City, Mo. Iowa State college won top honors in the contest.

Nebraska placed fourth on cattle, fifth on horses, eleventh on sheep, and fourteenth in hog judging. John Schick placed first among all contestants in hog judging, while Carl Ervin was eighth in judging horses. The highest Nebraska score in judging all classes was made by Milard Ickes.

Other members of the livestock judging team were Orris Corman and Verne Kerchberger. The coach was M. A. Alexander, associate professor in the animal husbandry department at the university college of agriculture.

Meat Team Places Third.

Coached by Paul Fidler, the meat judging team placed third out of the nine teams competing at the American royal, in Kansas City, Mo.

Verne Kerchberger ranked as third high individual in the contest. Ray Crawford and Schick tied for first place on the judging of lamb, which helped bring in the points and place Nebraska first in that division.

The team was composed of Verne Kerchberger, Ray Crawford, and John Schick.

either side of the question. There will then be squad meetings, then practise debates following which the teams will make the trips selected. Anyone not present at the Tuesday night meeting may still compete in squad tryouts.

Exact statement of the question plus some clarification material was released at the meeting. The proposition is "Resolved that the federal government should regulate by law all labor unions in the United States."

The following definitions are an intrinsic part of the proposition: "It shall be understood that the word regulate shall mean, at least: 1. requiring incorporation of all unions; 2. fixing responsibility for the acts of unions and the acts of their members during strikes and picketing; and 3. regulating the use of their funds, requiring them to make official accounting to their membership for all income and expenditures and to return to their members all excess at the end of each fiscal year."

People present at the meeting were: Mabel Jean Schner, Louise Woerner, Joyce Burt, Edwin Dosek, Art Rivin, Bert Smith, Laurence R. Kusek, Walt Greenberg, Robert Passer, Mort Zuber, Ronald Metz, Bill Rist and Yale Gotsdiner.
