

Huskers Aiming for Win

The DAILY NEBRASKAN

The Sports Mill

These Polls—

Ratings, the measuring stick of football, are hitting the newsstands with rapidity after Saturday's contests... This has been a tough season to rate teams with upsets occurring all over the map... The two top ratings every year are the Associated Press and the Azzi Ratem systems... Football teams can be considered leaders if they find themselves with the top ten on both of these ratings.

The A. P. rates the teams on the basis of votes by sports editors and coaches over the country for the first ten teams in the nation with the points figured on the 10-9-8-7-6 etc. basis... The Azzi Ratem system employs a more scientific method in setting up a standard and then the teams of the entire nation are compared to the perfect team... Thus the team that comes closest to the perfect score rates first and so on.

Minnesota Unanimous—

The Golden Gophers have finally shifted into high gear and reached the top of the ratings, where they are destined to stay... On the A. P. poll they received 112 first place votes losing but 18 for the top position... The Gophers ranked first on the Azzi Ratem poll also, to assure them of the National title with only Wisconsin blocking their way... The Big Six was represented in both ratings with Missouri capturing the honors... On the A. P. the Tigers were eighth and on the other, they ranked sixth.

Probable Line-up

POS.	NEBRASKA	IOWA
L.E.	Preston, 190, (c)	192 Parker
L.T.	Schleich, 234	200 Walker
L.G.	von Goetz, 182, 190, Bierkowsky
C.	Meier, 188 (c)	200, (c) Diehl
R.G.	Able, 201	180, Anderson
R.T.	Herndon, 200	205, Otto
R.E.	Thompson, 172	195, Burkett
Q.B.	Metheny	105, Coupe
L.H.	Bradley, 178	178, Farmer
R.H.	Zikmund, 190	185, Mertes
F.B.	Blue, 201	182, Green

Somebody's confused—

The ratings are a little ironical as far as Husker fans are concerned... Last year, Nebraska drove through a schedule as tough if not tougher than the Tigers have this season... The Huskers dropped their first game last year to Minnesota, eventual champs among champs, by a 13-7 count and then went on to swamp every other opponent in sight... This season, Missouri dropped their first encounter to Ohio State, a team that did not even make the top teams in the ratings, and have won all of the other games... On this basis, it seems to us that the Huskers had turned in a season every bit as good as the Tigers have done... Yet, on the final ratings, last year, the Huskers ended up in twelfth place and the Tigers are up in the eighth spot... Maybe we're confused, too, but what's done is past.

Zupp Calls It Quits—

For 29 years Bob Zuppke has put his all into Illinois' football teams... While he was producing Big Ten leaders, everything was bright and not a discordant bit of talk was heard... But then his teams went into a slump and immediately politics were brought into play and his scalp was demanded... At the start of the season Zupp fought this opposition tooth and nail and won his point... Now, he has conceded defeat to the "wolves" and has announced his resignation... "I don't want any banquet speeches. I don't want any sob parties. My 29 years haven't given me a gray hair. I want to leave without a discordant note," were Zupp's final words... Another coach has turned in his last season and Zupp has no complaints to make.

Gridders Set to Smear Hawkeyes as Starters Return to Nebraska Fold

By Bob Miller.

Nebraskan Sports Ed.

They're convinced! It's not going to be "Gloomy Saturday" in this state if the Husker gridders have their say about it. No sir, they are fully convinced that everything will be bright and cheery after they get through with the Iowa Hawkeyes. And to go beyond that they are going to prove it, come this afternoon at 2 p. m. in their old stomping grounds. They are convinced further that they have everything needed to accomplish the task.

Loss of Words.

The Husker coaching staff must be at a loss for words on top of it for week upon week since the season has started, some injury, some jinx has crept into the fold to cast the home team way down the list. Now, there is an entirely different outlook.

Herb von Goetz has returned to add a lot of weight and fight to the middle of the line. His chest injury has mended and now he is anxious to rend the Iowa line. Allen Zikmund is on hand to prove that he can outdo any past performance of the year.

Simmons Cheerful.

Kenny Simmons is smiling since he has been declared O. K. for the fray and Marvin Athey is through with the limping, due to a pulled tendon in his ankle.

Another bright spot appears since Vike Francis has regained his athletic eligibility by proving that he could answer the geography and English queries tossed at him. In practice throughout the week, Vike has been exhibiting the old-time form which endeared him to kids throughout the state. In fact he looked better than at any time this season.

Sophs Still There.

The sophomore situation remains bright with Wayne Sindt and Roy Long in their banging away along with Fred Metheny at the first string quarter's spot.

Yes, it's about time that the Huskers come around and with the addition of this material, previously lost to the squad, the Huskers have all the incentive needed to put out a winner.

It will be a tough game and there is no doubt about that, but for the first time in three weeks, we feel a lot surer when we mark the name "Nebraska" in the probable winner's column!

At the beginning of the current term, John Karmazin, member of the Wake Forest college freshman football team, had never attended a college football game.

'Building The Annual' Subject Of Discussion

By Emily Agnew.

William DeVriendt, Capital Engraving company, Lincoln, led the afternoon discussion group in 313 Friday on "Building the School Annual." Miss Millicent Cook, annual editor from Beatrice, presided and introduced the speaker.

There are three points to follow in planning your budget, said Mr. DeVriendt. Have a budget made so you can raise money, plan a book that will spend the money wisely, and have cooperation among staff members.

Skits are profitable in advertising annuals. Many ideas were presented by towns present on skits which have promoted large sales. Annuals do not necessarily need a theme it was decided, but they are helpful if they are not allowed to clutter it up. It is a good plan to vary your annuals from year to year.

Following the discussion, attending journalists were invited to inspect the annual display.

Central High Editor Leads Round Table

Lois Jean Turner, Editor-in-Chief of the Central High Register of Omaha, Neb., took charge of the round table discussion on make-up yesterday afternoon at the Union.

Lois Jean, a student at the Summer Institute of Journalism at Northwestern last summer, presented many new facts. Points which were stressed during the round table concerning steps that should be taken to produce good make-up were that every staff must know the resources of his printer, a headline schedule should be drawn for each edition, type should be known so that all headlines vary, and as few decks as possible should be used in headlines.

"Our newspaper staff has dropped all lines between columns because we believe that lines tend to make the make-up blacker," stated Lois Jean.

The make-up of the editorial page was one of the main subjects discussed. Views were given on gossip columns, by-lines, editorials and features. It was agreed that a lot of snappy feature headlines make this page more interesting.

Location of stories was also discussed. The advisor of the Central High Register pointed out that the only copy which is old that is permissible on the front page is a review of a play and this merits a by-line.

"Familiarity with news is most important to all make-up editors," concluded Lois Jean.

Winners . . .

Honorable mention was given to Elizabeth McKee, superior.

Individual winners were presented with certificates given by the Hastings Tribune. Plaques were awarded to the schools of first place winners. Contributors of the plaques include the Lincoln Star, Nebraska Farmer and the Grand Island Independent.
