conference cage starts as Kansas State's rampaging Wildcats were collecting their first Big-Six win, 38-35, here tonight.

Only a half minute of playing time had elapsed when the Kaggies captured a lead that was never relinquished. Showing determination as the result of riding in the loop cellar position since the season's start, the eventual winners exhibited championship ball all the way.

Net Bombarded.

The first half provided the margin of victory since the hosts got in a torrid scoring vein to roll up 21 points to the victors' 15.

Soon after both teams resumed the floor for the second canto, the Huskers showed that they had had something injected in them in the form of new scoring ability and for a while it looked like the Husker hot shots had sacrificed the first half as a warm-up period.

Huskies Even Count.

At one time in the proceedings after the final half was under way the Scarlet cagers struggled up to a 27-27 deadlock with the victors. It was at this point that the injection seemed to have lost its force for the Kaggies tightened down and sharpened their collective shooting eyes.

Acting captain, Sonny Howe, took his added responsibilities strongly as he was the deciding factor in the Kansas victory. His long archer near the end of the game seemed to be the clincher that broke the Nebraskans' spirit.

Phog Predicts Big Six Result Ahead Time

LAWRENCE, Kas., Feb. 2.—"Without any doubt, the Big Six basketball race this year will end in a tie," is the opinion of Dr. F. C. Allen, University of Kansas coach.

"The league is getting tougher every year," says Allen, who points to the number of ties in recent years as an indication of the trend.

K. U. and Nebraska.

In 1937 Kansas tied with Nebraska for the cage championship. The next year the Jayhawks won the title outright, but three straight ties have followed. In 1939 it was Missouri and Oklahoma; in 1940 Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma; and last year Kansas and Iowa State.

Despite his team's loss to Iowa State, Allen is not discouraged about prospects. "For one thing," he says, "this 1942 squad has a wonderful morale. In addition, Ray Evans is coming into his own, after a slow start and Ralph Miller is standing out now with his passing and floorwork, rather than strictly as a shooter."

Howe got hot on his shot to put the game on ice. Kenny Elson came down the floor with the ball in his possession and as soon as he reached mid-court he let fly. The ball nestled through the nets as the game ended to provide the relatively small crowd with a game for their money.

Larry Beaumont, K State guard, ran away with individual scoring honors for the fray as he contributed 12 points to the total. Howe did not let him win undisputed honors, potting 12 points on his own hook.

Horacek Stars Defensively.

Jack Horacek and Bruce Holman turned in good defensive games along with scoring necessary points on the offense.

For Nebraska, the scoring privileges were well apportioned with three Huskers pouring in the same number for high point honors. Sid Held, more on the defensive than otherwise, got six points as did both Kenny Elson and John Bottorff, sophomore prospects. John Thompson racked up five points to rank next.

Cagers Stand Pat.

The loss does not throw the Huskers into the cellar for in fact they stay in the same position. Leading the Big Six parade with four wins and a single loss are both Oklahoma and Kansas U. Iowa State has three wins and two losses and now Nebraska has two wins and three losses.

Missouri and K State as the result of last night's game have claims on the low spot with one

Menze Thinks Big Six Teams Well Balanced

Iowa Squad Drops UN Previously: On Guest List For Saturday Night Fray

AMES, Iowa, Feb. 2.—"We've seen them all but Kansas State and I think it's the best balanced basketball season in years," is the way Louis Menze, Iowa State College coach, feels about the current Big Six race.

"The entire league is so evenly matched," continued the Cyclone mentor, "that no team dares be the slightest bit off its game. In fact, if a team doesn't play a little over its head it may wind up on the short end of the score. The team that's hitting is the team that's going to win the game."

And the Iowa state coach should know whereof he speaks. Leaving Ames last week in first place, the Cyclones returned from games with Missouri and Oklahoma in fourth.

"We played one great game and lost," Menze explained, "and we played a poor one and lost. Against Missouri, which reached its best performance of the year, we were definitely below par. But against Oklahoma we gave everything we had and found Bruce Drake's boys just too hot to handle."

With only a few sessions in which to prepare for the Saturday night game with second division Nebraska, Menze is not planning any radical changes in the Cyclone lineup. He indicated in scrimmage sessions that he was seeking more strength, both on offense and defense, but did not feel the need of much shifting of men.

One man, however, did appear to be nearing a chance at a starting spot. Menze indicated that Rollin Kuebler, sophomore from Carroll would see lots of action. Kuebler, the Cyclone coach said, played great ball the entire second half against Oklahoma.

Climax of the opera comes when Alfio discovers his wife's unfaithfulness and he agrees to a duel with Turiddu to vindicate his honor. Consumed by a mortal hate, the two prepare for a duel to the death and only one of the two men can live.

"Intermezzo," played in the middle of the opera, is the most outstanding piece in "Cavalleria Rusticana," but much of the other music is familiar in many churches at Easter tide.
