I-M Debate Filings Are Due Today

Fraternity Members To Argue Conscription Of Labor for Duration

Entries for intra-mural debate tournament must be filed with the department of speech or Bert Smith at the Phi Kappa Psi house by 5 p. m. today, according to Smith who is handling the entries while Professor Leroy Laase is on a debate trip.

The schedule will be conducted on a round-robin basis if there are enough entries. Otherwise a double-elimination system will be used to determine the winner of the trophy, won last year by Zeta Beta Tau.

Question to be debated is, Resolved, that Congress should enact legislation providing for the conscription of labor for the prosecution of the war. Each team must be prepared to debate both sides of the question.

Each team will consist of two speakers with eight minute constructive and four minute rebuttals. Any team may substitute personnel from round to round, providing the names are included on the original entry list. Varsity debaters, are ineligible.

As in the past, the debates will be held in the houses of the affirmative teams. Professor Laase with the aid of varsity debaters will handle the administration of the competition.

On Ag Campus . . . Ak-Sar-Ben Ball Tonight To Feature All-Girl Band

By Randall Pratt.

You're in for it girls... You'll be dancing with your backs to the orchestra at the Junior Ak-Sar-Ben ball tonight. It's just human nature for the boys to be facing the orchestra... That is tonight, for it's going to be an all-girl band. Jane Griffith is her name and they say she has a mighty sweet outfit... Both for beauty and music. One proof of the quality of music she produces is the honor of having won the title of being the first prize winner in an Omaha orchestra contest. There's going to be a 30 minute floor show put on by these girls, too... Which should really be worth seeing.

In the center of the dance floor, which incidentally is in the student activities building, will be a pen of young lambs and pigs to give the party an Ak-Sar-Ben atmosphere. Tickets may be purchased from Block and Bridle pledges or may be bought at the door for 75 cents. Everyone is invited to come.

City campus students are especially invited to the event because it is felt by many students, both ag and city, that those who miss out on the ag dances are really missing out on a lot of fun. Ag dances have a reputation of being informal and friendly. If you'd (See AK-SAR-BEN, page 7)

Authority on Far East To Lecture Here Today

James R. Young.
...expert on orient will speak at convocation here.

James R. Young, recently returned from Tokyo where he was head of the International News Service for ten years, will lecture this morning at 11 a. m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Young, recognized by newspapermen as an expert on the Far East, had predicted the probability of a Japanese-American clash or an "undeclared incident." He served in the Orient for the past 13 years, and is now on an extensive lecture tour.

Young is not very well liked by the Japanese who kept him in prison for two months because he wrote articles "which the police disliked." His release was secured through Ambassador Joseph Grew, a friend of the INS correspondent.

Since his return, there has been a clamor on the part of publishers for his articles on Japan, Readers' Digest, Coronet, Esquire, Amerasia and Flying and Popular Aviation have printed articles by him since July, 1941. He has had a book entitled "Behind the Rising Sun" published also.

In September, 1940, Readers' Digest printed an article about Young written by J. P. McEvoy and condensed from the American Mercury. It concerned Young's experiences or "Sixty-one days in a Japanese Jail or One-hundred and Eight meals with Chopsticks."

Besides heading the INS staff, Young was also manager of the American owned Japan Advertiser, largest and most influential English language paper in the Orient. In addition, he served as Far Eastern sales representative of King Features syndicate and managed an advertising agency.

Young will analyze events in the Far East at his lecture this morning. Much of his talk is expected to furnish new information since he is in constant touch with sources that are open to no one else.

He comes from the Scripps and Patterson families of newspaper fame and his daily contact with the INS bureau in New York and personal sources which he has cultivated over the last two decades.

Chicago Newspaper Pictures UN Party

Sunday's Chicago Tribune will picture "life on the Nebraska campus" in its graphic section. Photographs were taken at the Interfraternity ball. Eleanor Nangle is author of the feature story on UN.

After describing the presentation of Toni McQuistan as I-F Sweetheart, Miss Nangle writes "Nebraska is an extremely social school. From the time the formal season opens in December with the Military Ball and ends late in March with the Junior-Senior Prom, hardly a weekend passes without at least one large formal party. Each organization gives one during the season, and some of them are famous.

"...The girls dress well at Nebraska and seem to give considerably thought to styling themselves well... Morning, noon and night students seem to feast on the weird combination of shoe-string potatoes with catsup and cokes."

Organization of the university into three campuses and a description of new buildings being built is also described in the article which is entitled, "Youth on the Campus."

A large picture of the crowd shows faces of I-F party goers that can be recognized. There are also pictures of Suzanne Woodruff, Maribel Hitchcock, Marilyn Linblade, Becky Wait, Rena Forsyth, Toni McQuistan, Barbara York, Pat Herminghaus, Jack Stewart, Alan Zikmund.

Book Drive Will End Tomorrow

Defense Group Hopes Final Collection to Bring Total from UN to 10,000

"Books for Victory" has been the theme on the campus the past week as everyone rummaged through attics and basements for one more book for the "V" book campaign which the Student Defense Council is sponsoring.

Tomorrow winds up the drive when the books collected on the city and ag campuses, from Lincoln alumni, organized houses, organizations for unaffiliated students, students, faculty and administrative offices.

The goal set last week by Laurel Morrison and Mary Rosborough, drive chairmen, was 10,000 books but with the full collection (See BOOKS, page 4)
