Sports Whirl

By Bob Miller

● NEBRASKA'S redhead, Eugene Littler, has been released from the hospital where he was confined for the last week with pneumonia. . . . Red has set so many records and won so many first place spots that he can't remember all of them. . . . This is his third siege of pneumonia and it left him fairly well played out. . . . According to his plans now he will begin working out on the track again in two weeks and should be ready to run at the West Point triangular meet on May 2. . . . He will probably have a chance to run at the National Intercollegiate which will be held in the middle of June on the Nebraska oval. . . . After that, Red becomes one of Uncle Sam's warbirds.

● JUST look at the record of those Ak-Sar-Ben Knights on the hockey rinks of the midwest. . . . It was not so long ago that the Knights were fighting tooth and nail to land among the top three out of four in the northern division of the American hockey association. . . . By squeezing in under the line and getting into the top three they were eligible for the playoffs in their division. . . . They played the No. 2 team and won two games; then they met the No. 1 team, St. Paul, in the finals of the division and swept through three games. . . . From there on Saturday night on Omaha ice, the Knights met the Kansas City Amerks and downed them 5-3. . . . On Sunday night they took the second game of the final series by a 6-5 count on K. C. ice, leaving them two games out of the championship. . . . That gives them seven straight games that they have won without a loss. . . . And in playoffs, too.

● FROM the looks of things in this corner, the fraternity I-M race looks like a tight one. . . . Two disqualifications of opposing teams in the recent track finals combined to put the Betas on top of the pile. . . . with golf and tennis results counted. . . . The Phi Gams are second. . . . Both teams have advanced to the playoffs in bowling and the softball was begun tonight to decide the Jack Best award for sure. . . . If the Betas win their league in softball, they virtually have the title. . . . If not, it's going to be much closer than one could imagine. . . . There's something in that old motto, "Uneasy is the head that is about to wear the crown."

● HUSKER diamond addicts got into their suits and had a game Saturday afternoon. . . . The Regulars trimmed the Yannigans, 11-5. . . . Activity in this sport is slated to begin when the team meets the Minnesota aggregation on foreign soil on April 24 and 25. . . . The battery combination is proving the source of the most worry for Coach Ad Lewandowski and his aide-de-camp, Rolley Horney. . . . There are but two experienced pitchers and one catcher. . . . The showing that the baseballers can make this spring will be important in the final Big Six all-sports award. . . . Oklahoma is leading at this time with the final results of outdoor track, baseball, tennis and golf yet to be figured in. . . . Nebraska is a point and a half behind in second place.

● SPEAKING of tennis and golf, athletic director John Selleck, due to the pleading of some of the members of the two squads, has added another match to both schedules. . . . Both teams will meet representatives of the University of Minnesota on Minneapolis courts and links on April 24. . . . This gives them four matches for their spring quota due to rationing. . . . Minnesota has been one of the most consistent foes that we have had this year. . . . Husker teams have met or will meet them in football, basketball, gymnastics, wrestling, swimming, track, tennis, golf and baseball. . . . No polo?

Minnesota Squad Will Select Queen for Annual KU Relays

... Events Shaping Fast

LAWRENCE.—University of Minnesota's track squad, tutored by Coach Jim Kelly, will select the queen for the twentieth annual University of Kansas relays, from nominations submitted by the various organized houses and independent students on Mt. Oread, Clint Kanaga, student relays manager, announced today. Photographs of the beautiful Jayhawker co-eds are to be submitted to members of the Gopher squad who will choose the reigning favorite from the pictures.

Heading the Big Ten delegation to the Kansas relays will be the Minnesota squad, who have indicated that a full complement of 24 contestants will represent the Golden Gophers following a dual meet with Nebraska on April 17. While entries from Iowa and Northwestern have not arrived, they are expected to send delegations as they have not missed the Kansas relays in many years, H. W. Hargiss, relays manager, the Kansas track coach said. Inquiries have been received from Notre Dame, and Hargiss is trying to arrange for at least the appearance of part of their squad.

Missouri and Iowa State have sent entry blanks, and other Big Six schools are expected to follow within a few days. All Central and Kansas Conference schools, Hargiss said, plan to send teams for the annual event. In the meantime, entries from high schools and junior colleges are pouring in. One of the most distant entries came in today's mail from the Prairie View State

Eisenhart and Hopp Prove to Be 'Finds'

Courtesy Sunday Journal and Star.

Army and Navy Teams Facing Spring Finale

Weather Plus Injuries Have Been a Hindrance In Spring Football Drills

Husker exponents of the grid sport are in the home stretch now. This week marks the last week of the spring drill sessions and will be climaxed by a big scrimmage session on Saturday afternoon.

So far this spring, various things have been popping up to hamper the Husker coaches in their prescribed drill routines. The weather has predominated in being the wet blanket, closely pursued by injuries.

Football started on March 2 and since that time the gridders have managed to get out just about as much as they have had to stay in. The cold spell in the early part of March was the most damaging from that standpoint.

Injuries have held some of the individual players back. The centers have gotten the worst of it. Forrest Bachman, Army A center, got a tooth chipped out, several loosened and his lips and gums cut badly when he was kicked in a recent battle.

Amos Hatfield developed the flu and has been out. For the last scrimmage, Joe Partington, red-haired snap artist, was in Des Moines taking a Marine corps exam. Charley Duda, guard who developed a great deal during the closing games last fall, is now sporting crutches, nursing a broken ankle.

During the last scrimmage, held Friday afternoon, it was the lack of centers that spelled defeat for Teachers college, of Texas.

Relays officials are hoping for fair weather to offset the drab dullness of last year's carnival which was held on a cold windy day which ruined performances and cut down attendance.

Dr. Glenn Cunningham, former world's champion miler and now director of athletics at Cornell college, Mt. Vernon, Ia., will return to his alma mater to serve as referee of the relays. The inter-scholastic events will be held on Friday, April 17.

the Army team. Due to a bad center, Dale Bradley was trapped behind his own goal for a safety.

Final score was 2-0 in favor of the Navy team. This is the first time the Navy Blues have been able to hold an advantage during the scrimmage sessions. The Army team has three wins to its credit.

Bobby Cooper issued a thirty yard pass to Allen Zikmund for the longest gain of the afternoon. There will be another session between the two on Wednesday and then the grand closing on Saturday.
