Barbs, Greeks Go to Polls Today Geared for Battle

This is election day!
It's a case of barbs versus greeks with both parties geared for a close battle. Both men and women running for Student Council are being officially supported by the two parties; there is no sub-rosa backing.

Here is what students going to the polls at the Union and ag hall will be voting on:

1. Student Council representatives .
2. Publication Board members.
3. Ivy Day Orator.
4. Universal subscription to the Daily Nebraskan.
5. Amendment to the Student Council Constitution.

Also to be decided on ag campus will be members of the ag executive social council and coll-agri-fun boards and officers of the WAA Ag council. Ag students can vote only at ag campus, Dick Harnsberger, chairman of the elections committee, said yesterday.

Holding a last minute, pre-election rally last night at the Union, barb leaders predicted a large turn-out for the balloting with much emphasis on the proposed amendment to the Student Council constitution. Yesterday afternoon, campaign literature was distributed, and a loud-speaker system, attached to a car, was used to stir up interest of unaffiliated students.

Gilbert Heuffle, junior class president of last year, who was leading barb election festivities, was released last night by Lincoln police after being booked on charges of operating a public address system on a car without a permit by municipal authorities. Heuffle will have to appear in traffic court soon.

A large and boisterous crowd in the Union ballroom heard speeches last night by Bill Daffoe, barb campaign manager; Blaine Sloane, former barb chieftain; Roy Byram, barb floor

Fullbrook States US Needs Changes To Secure Victory

To achieve victory, the United States must make drastic changes in the allocation of productive resources, Professor Earl S. Fullbrook, speaking on the "American And World War II" lecture series, declared yesterday afternoon at the Union.

A smaller crowd than usual heard Dr. Fullbrook warn of the need for an immense shift of production from consumers goods to war munitions. A lowering of living standards will result, he said.

"It is quite different from normal times when economics is concerned with distributing productive resources of labor, land, capital and materials to various production lines so as to provide consumers with maximum satisfaction at minimum costs."

Must Depend on Increases.

"In building up war production to a maximum, the United States must depend largely upon increases in total production and decreases in consumption by the ultimate consumers," said the speaker. "As the war effort has progressed, most of the peace-time slack in our productive system has been taken up, and hereafter we shall have to expand our war production at the expense of consumers' goods."

The price system, which in peace time directs productive resources into the proper channels, is too slow and uncertain to rely upon in a war economy, declared Professor Fullbrook. The government must determine what is needed and then formulate and execute policies necessary to achieve desired results. Freedom of enterprise may have to be abandoned into the process.

The priorities system—"putting first things first"—is one device for making a wartime economy effective. The government; having determined which needs are most important, directs productive resources to fulfill them regardless of price. Soon shortages of consum-

On Ag Campus Riding School Sponsors 1942 Intersorority Ride

By Randall Pratt.

The Intersorority Ride won't be sponsored by the Farmer's Fair Board this year cus there just hain't none no more. But...there will be a Intersorority Ride and this year it will be sponsored by Leo Lewellen, manager of the Lincoln Riding School. It will be a feature of the regular horse show given for the people of Lincoln and the University.

This Sunday will be the day for the competition between the different sorority representatives. In order to distribute the representation more evenly between the houses, each house is entitled to two riders. Both girls may enter either the Seat and Hands division or the Western style or both, if they prefer.

Pat Chamberlain, treasurer of the University Women's Riding club, announced the following sororities that have entered the competition: Alpha Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Delta Gamma, Pi Beta Phi, Gamma Phi Beta, Alpha Xi Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Sigma Kappa, and Kappa Delta.

Davis to Judge.

Mr. Charles Davis, prominent Lincoln horseman, will be the judge for the University division. The sorority gaining the most points will receive a trophy by the WAA. Horses will be furnished by the Lincoln Riding Academy. There will be an opportunity for a few riders that wish to enter the exhibition pair class.

The show starts at 1:30 p. m. at the fair grounds amphitheater. Admission?...It's free.

A few Nebraska farmers will have the opportunity of growing some of the new experimental alfalfa variety—known as A-153.

This is a new variety which
