Administration Approves Plan

School to Grant 14 Day Leaves

BY BOB MILLER.

All men students in the university, desiring to do so, will be given a two weeks leave of absence to help plug a labor shortage on Nebraska defense projects and upon farms in the near future.

This announcement came as the result of a meeting of university officials with Dean T. J. Thompson as chairman to attempt in the alleviation of a "grave manpower shortage throughout the state."

A voluntary plan, the idea carries with it the opportunity for any male student regularly enrolled in school to obtain a two weeks leave to take a job on any of the defense projects that are so desperately in need of workers and on the farms where the situation is equally as bad.

Thompson Guides.

Dean Thompson, under whose guidance the plan was formulated, called a meeting of all deans of colleges plus the P. M. S. & T. of the ROTC corps to explain the situation confronting management in this state.

As the set-up now stands, those interested will contact Thompson's office and a check-up will be made to see if by dropping out of school for the two week period it would jeopardize the student's academic chances for the year. After this each case will be handled separately thru the various professors before final permission is granted.

Situation Is Bad.

To impress the student body of the seriousness of this lack of labor, Thompson showed a plea for 500 men immediately on a federal project in the state and pointed out that there is more defense work on satellite air bases in the state that are literally "crying for workers."

He wished to point out also the serious conditions facing the farmer who with one of the best corn crops in the last decade may be forced to allow the corn to lay thru the winter before it can be husked.

Crops Suffer.

"Around Scottsbluff the labor shortage is taking a heavy toll on crops that are ready to be harvested," the dean of student affairs explained.

According to present indications, a student may apply for a leave (See SHORTAGE, Page 2)

Allege Violations In Scrap Drive

... Announce Rules(?)

Rules for the homecoming scrap metal drive, sponsored by Innocents met thruout the afternoon in quiet, informal meet-terday, but members of the men's senior honorary were per-turbed over alleged violations of the "spirit of the contest" that the rules did not affect.

While no official word came from any of the sponsors, Innocents met thruout the afternoon in quiet, infromal meet-ings pondering what action to take to keep their contest from becoming a disgraceful display of student loyalty.

In the meantime, rules for the drive, which this year re-places the traditional decorations contest between organized houses, were announced as follows:

Cups will be awarded as usual to the men's house with the most scrap and to the women's house leading in the drive. The announcement and the presenta-tion will be made according to university tradition at the annual Homecoming dance Saturday night.

Metal or Rubber.

All scrap must be either metal or rubber. No tin cans will be acceptable. The committee in charge of arrangements suggest that the scrap be piled either on the sidewalks leading to the house, or on the porch so that lawns will not suffer.

With the permission of the Union, arrangements have been made to collect all contributions of (See SCRAP DRIVE, Page 2)

Daily Reveals Weaker Sex Not So Weak

Women are not the weaker sex. They have just as many ribs as men.

Prof. D. D. Whitney revealed this astounding and gratifying fact during a zoology class yester-day. Which statement proves quite conclusively that Nebraskan Columnist Bob McNutt made a slight mistake in his column on "women" appearing in yesterday's Daily.

Not that McNutt doesn't know that women are men's equals; he probably just had to have an ending for his article.

Union Advances Admission Price On Friday Dances

"Hank" Mattison will play Fri-day night at the first big Union week-end dance of the year. An orchestra shortage has made it impossible to hold such a dance before this year.

Because of the limited budget of the Union and the raised scale prices of the musicians union, the previously charged admission price of 15c has been raised to 25c per person this year.
