

Uni Theatre Produces First Play

Of 'Frying Pan' Begins Tonight

First nighters will witness everything from murderers to lovers when the curtain rises tonight on the season's first play, "Out of the Frying Pan." This riotous comedy takes place in an apartment in New York where three young men and three young women are living together, due to financial difficulties.

The six young people are ambitious young actors and actresses trying to get in a Broadway play. The producer of the play, living in the apartment directly below, is the center of all their hopes and eventually becomes the victim of their ambitions, as he is lured into the upstairs apartment and held rather forcibly until he agrees to witness their play.

Matters are not helped any when a number of misunderstandings arise concerning the living conditions of the six actors and actresses. It doesn't take them long to realize that three young men and three young women cannot live together in one apartment without inviting trouble. This trouble comes in the form of a shocked guest and an unexpectedly arrived father who is soon tactfully driven out of the apartment. The guest is a little harder to get rid of so the six actors and actresses soon find a part for her in their play, stopping at nothing in making her up to fit the role—that of a corpse.

Reserved tickets for the play are still on sale in the box office at the Temple. Single admissions, 75c and season tickets $2.20. General admission at the door is 50c.

CAUGHT WITH HIS PANTS DOWN . . . is Larry Taylor (center) as George, confronted by Bill Palmer in the part of Mr. Colburn, while Kate, played by Roberta Burgess, tries to cover up Larry in a scene from "Out of the Frying Pan," first offering of the University Theater, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

YW Sponsors Tea for Frosh On Thursday

Officers Explain Group Organization to First Year Women Tomorrow

The traditional Y. W. C. A. tea for Freshmen girls is Thursday from 3:30 to 5:30 in Ellen Smith Hall Mrs. Samuel Avery, newly elected president of the Y. W. C. A. Advisory Board; Miss Mary Lockett, Y. W. C. A. Secretary; Lois Christie, head of the Freshmen Commission Leaders, and Helen Kelley, President of the Y. W. C. A. will receive. Members of the regular cabinet will serve, and the Freshmen Commission Leaders will greet the girls and explain to them the Freshmen Commissions.

This is the first opportunity for Freshmen girls to sign up for YW activities since the activities start Saturday. They will have an opportunity to join YW Thursday. The membership fee is $2, which covers their four years at the University. A committee has been selected from active members of the YW to investigate the membership fee, but for at least the first semester, there will be no change in the fee.

Thursday Freshmen girls will have an opportunity to sign up for Freshmen Commissions. These commissions will meet at different times during the week and each group will discuss the same topic, so that every girl may find one time that she can come.

Coed Counselors Sponsor Charm School Meeting

First meeting of Charm School, which is sponsored by Coed Counselors, was held in Ellen Smith hall last night at 7:30, at which 40 were present, the largest number in history.

Guest speakers were Dean Verna Boyles and Mrs. J. O. Hertzler of Lincoln.

These meetings are in charge of Ann Seacrest and Gloria Mardis.

Enlistment Reserve Corps Closes Dec. 21

Sports Board, WAA Present Prizes Tonight

Sports board and WAA council members will hold a mass meeting tonight at 8 in Grant Memorial hall as announced by Betty Newman, president.

Main feature of the evening will be the presentation of the WAA plaque to the group who won the women's intramural competition last year. Awards for outstanding individual performances and to group game winners will also be given.

A technicolor movie of WAA activities, including informal action shots of various clubs, will complete the program.

All freshmen girls are urged to attend the first WAA mass meeting.

Conflicting reports have been circulating around the campus concerning the Enlisted Reserve Corps and possible enlistments.

To clarify the situation, T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs, has issued the declaration that "enlistments for students now enrolled in the university will close on Dec. 21." This deadline leaves about six weeks available for enlistments to be made.

Because of rumors influencing students to forget the Enlisted Reserve there has been a lapse in the number of enlistments. Some of these reports have been to the effect that all quotas are filled and that anyone who would happen to get into a reserve would be called immediately.

The dean in his statement points out that "such enlistment imposes no military service responsibilities other than that which will be the lot of every able-bodied young man of 18 and more years of age when the draft bill now pending before congress is passed."

With Christmas vacation taking substantially from the remaining time this semester, there is little time left before the deadline to complete the necessary forms for enlistment, which in themselves take a good deal of time. Dean Thompson continues, "students interested should reach a decision and begin

On Two Campuses . . . 'Contemporary Institutions' Course Now Offered Here

. . . In Three Sections

In keeping with a general expansion of curriculum to include war courses, the university is offering a new course, "Contemporary Institutions," which includes problems related to sociology, economics and political science.

The course involves the study of the social organizations of our time and lectures will be given on government, business, labor, agriculture, and family problems. Instructing the three sections of this course will be Karl Arndt of the economics department, and Otto G. Hoiber of the sociology department on the downtown campus, and C. M. Elliott of the economics department on the ag campus.

Complete Course

Each instructor keeps his own section an entire school year, and each teaches all the fields involved. Therefore, the course presents not a "slice of one subject up against another," but a complete course in which the study concerns the sociological, economic and political sides of each institution.

Though the presentation of the subject is new, the idea itself is not new. A similar "survey" idea is involved in two courses already established at Nebraska, known as
