Brewster Plays . . . NIA Breaks Social Ice With Dance, Floor Show

. . . In Union Ballroom

Some with dates, many stag, unaffiliated students on the campus will attend the first big barb social function tomorrow night in the Union ballroom as the NIA council sponsors its ice-breaking dancing party from 9 to 12.

Acting as master of ceremonies at the intermission floor-show—still a mystery—will be Brown Palace Co-op man Jimmie Howe, it was announced yesterday. Boyd Brewster and his all-student band, which has furnished the music for many house-parties on the campus this fall and will play for the Union next weekend, will furnish music for the dancing.

Tickets Start.

Ticket sales started last week. They have been coming along "quite well," Virginia Stuermer, NIA social chairman, reported last night. However, tickets will also be on sale at the door during the dance, she said.

Price of admission to the affair is 25 cents per person. Representatives from different barb houses and organizations on the campus have been in charge of selling the tickets, and those not belonging to any organized group have been contacted through the district system.

Co-ops Support.

Many of the co-ops have already shown that they will turn out full force for the initial event planned by the Nebraska Independent Association for all unaffiliated students on the campus. Stags are especially invited, since, as the first party, it is a get-acquainted affair.

Held weekly before each home game the regular matinee dance following the Missouri game will be sponsored by the NIA Council in the Union ballroom Saturday from about 5:30 to 6:30.

Students selling tickets to tomorrow night's dance include Ruth Sherburn, Towne club; Jimmie Howe, Brown Palace; Bill Green, Bachelor's club; Dwight Davis, Cornhusker Co-op; Eleanor Jacka, Carrie Belle Raymond dorm; Pat Sand, Howard hall; Gladys Henderson, Wilson hall; Geraldine Thomas, Rosa Bouton hall; Dave Marvin, Palladians; Bill Lowrey, ACBC; and Barbara Rehburg, Myron Samuelson; Bob Dewey, Ralph Fox, Georgia Walker, Frances Babich, Betty Lu Larson and Virginia Stuermer at large.

Males Divide on What To Wear To Stadium

By Paul Toren.

The next time you go to a football game, look around at what the boys are wearing. Tear your eyes away from the pretty red sweaters in the sorority section, look at the men. You'll find, if you can keep your eyes maleward long enough, that the "stronger sex" is divided on what is the correct attire for the big game. One group of boys seemingly believes the pictures in Esquire and shows up complete to the last detail in an ensemble that may only be described as "stunning." This group also may include the gentlemen who must preserve their dignity of their noble rank and station at any cost.

The other group, bless 'em, is of a different mind. A football game is obviously a place to let yourself go, in clothing as well as in yelling. The typical outfit is topped off with a chic little hunting cap, preferably red, or felt hat no less than five years old. Neckties are taboo and as to shirts, let your conscience be your guide. Corduroys are in vogue now and opinion seems to be divided between cowboy boots and shoes, ala L'il Abner. Fitted out like this, who wouldn't enter into the spirit of things and cheer the Huskers on to victory? And, of course, the gay young blade feels devilish as hell dressed like this and it's always good for a laugh when all else fails.

See you at the game, and don't forget your red earmuffs.
