Calling Mr. X...

Student interest in general campus problems has been adequately shown in numerous "Letters to the Editor" in the past few weeks. The editor appreciates these letters and will print all that are sent in as soon as possible. These letters serve as a barometer of student opinion and are valuable both to the student body and the administration as well as the Daily Nebraskan.

Several letters have been written to the editor which have been unsigned. It is impossible to print these letters since at the outset of publication this fall, it was announced that all letters must be signed. Printing an unsigned letter is comparable to printing rumors as tho they were facts with no basis for the facts and no authority to back them up.

If a student has sent in a letter and did not sign it but wishes it to be printed, the editor will talk the matter over with him and reach a decision upon his letter. Several letters of this type worth printing have been received but will not be printed unless claimed.

Stick Around...

Many students are in a quandry over transportation difficulties during Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations and have been unable to make definite plans. Many will undoubtedly have to change their plans to the

Famous French Works Are Feature Of University Art Exhibit in Morrill

"Reproductions—Modern French Art" are being exhibited in gallery B at Morrill hall from Nov. 14 until Dec. 7. They include many prints by the most famous of the modern French artists, including Cezanne, Picasso, Van Gogh and Severini.

"The Uprising," by Daumier, political caricaturist, and artist of the earlier school, is an unusual study in browns employing special light effects. It is a picture of an aroused crowd and each face in the crowd is a character study in itself.

Picasso Exhibits.

Surrealistic and abstract paintings in which the artist presents his ideas in the way he feels with no attempt to achieve realism by Picasso are included in the exhibits. Many of his other paintings are also shown—such as "Incafe," a study in blues of a woman seated in a cafe.

"The Moon and Sixpence," a startling book and current movie which has caused a lot of controversy, concerns the life of Gauguin, one of the French modern artists. His pictures are of lovely girls from Tahiti, and his liquid coloring and natural painting catch the soft, peaceful spirit of life in the South Sea islands.

Coloring Featured.

"The Artist Returns" is a picture by Van Gogh which displays the mad intensity and vivid coloring for which he is famous. He went mad, and was committed to an institution for the insane before he committed suicide. Another of his pictures on exhibit is of the lovely gardens in the hospital for the insane to which he was sent.

Ralph Reeder Named Editor At Ag College

Ralph L. Reeder has been appointed agricultural editor of that college according to an announcement by the dean of the college of agriculture, W. W. Burr. Reeder has been the alumni editor at the university since 1935.

He succeeds Russell Prescott, now employed by the federal western regional research laboratory, Albany, California.

Reeder graduated from the University of Nebraska school of journalism in 1933. He was employed in the university editorial office for two years, and has been assistant director of publicity for the university since September.

Letterip

We fail to see the wisdom of extending Christmas vacation. We do not see how this measure will alleviate the transportation difficulties for which purpose it was supposedly designed.

In our opinion transportation facilities will be more clogged immediately preceding Christmas vacation (at which time the students will be traveling under the proposed plan) than they will be ten days or two weeks following Christmas.

This fact becomes obvious when we realize that everyone using the transportation facilities will not be students, and while all will be going home at the same time, the return trips will be staggered at various intervals.

Therefore, since the problem is twofold: (1) to alleviate the congestion of transportation facilities and (2) to make sure the students get home for Christmas, it seems obvious that it would be much wiser to begin vacation a few days earlier rather than to extend it a few days later thus clearing the student traffic from the transportation arteries before others begin to use them.

Sincerely yours,

Milton Adler
George Campen
E. A. Herzog.

(Editor's note: I am sure the committee considering the change will take every factor available into consideration before they make the change. It seems to me, however, that in order to insure students of being home for Christmas that the vacation should begin before Dec. 23 as it is now scheduled. The change which is being considered will extend the vacation to the middle of the week so that students will not be riding trains during a weekend when travel seems to be heaviest.

last minute to conform with the plans of men in the armed forces who will want to travel at this time too.

Since these vacations are less than one month apart, many students should make plans to go home for only one of them. Most of us can spend our time profitably catching up on school work and finding other things to occupy our time. Nebraska plays a football game during the Thanksgiving vacation which is an added incentive for postponing vacation plans until Christmas.

Thanksgiving and Christmas may be the only time many men in the armed forces get home for many months and it seems not only the patriotic but also the logical plan, to stay on the campus during one of these vacations.

Dear Editor:

views when he painted and displayed his "Picnic on the Grass" of which a reproduction is included in this exhibit.

Renoir's Women.

Renoir's claim to the title of "painter of beautiful women" is proved in his portrait, "The Two Sisters."

A picture that deserves and needs long and careful study is "Restless Dancers," by G. Severini. It is painted with dabs of color, and the longer one looks the more figures and faces are revealed.

"The Fiddler" is a small painting by Chagall, a Russian painter who is now painting in the United States. The small figures around the edge of the picture remind one of the crayon drawing of a small child.

Board, the Cornhusker, WAA, Coed Counselors, YWCA, AWS, and the Daily are all doing their "utmost" to boost sales.

Again quoting the business manager, $1.00 is not too high a price to ask the student to pay to preserve at Nebraska one of the best traditions of democracy—the free presentation of free thoughts to the world."

At Blair Meeting... University Registrars Hear College War Aims Outlined

Altho G. W. Rosenlof failed to speak due to illness, an address prepared by the UN registrar containing the aims of colleges and universities during this war was read last week at the Blair, Neb., meeting of the Nebraska branch of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars.

Miss Mary Zimmer, statistician in the registrar office, read the speech at the meeting. In the speech Mr. Rosenlof outlined ten main objectives and results that are likely to happen to American colleges and universities during the war.

Enrollment to Fall. Enrollment in U. S. colleges will toboggan, falling off considerably as the war goes on. The registrar pointed out that every college must adjust their programs and emphasize the sciences and mathematics. At the present time 65 to 70 percent of men in the armed forces are technically trained.

It is up to colleges to insure physical fitness. His speech mentioned that the teaching of languages will be increased considerably by colleges. Another objective for colleges is to play up the war aims and post-war activities. American universities should wholeheartedly conform to the demands of the government. Colleges should help war industries by producing more trained men such as engineers. Medicine, dentistry and nursing courses should be recognized and urged to students.

Full Year.

The UN registrar believes that colleges and students will begin taking a more active part in civilian defense. Every college should run on a full year schedule with an accelerated program.

In the future he thinks that the various colleges and universities will accept outstanding students in high school who lack only a few credits for graduation. In this way university credit may be obtained while still taking courses for high school graduation. A student taking 16 hours in the university and lacking two high school credits would be able to apply six hours on high school and graduate and then have 10 hours in the university. A whole semester may be gained by such a student.

Mr. Rosenlof pointed out that these were not just aims of the University of Nebraska. He believes that the above objectives, aims and results apply to every American college.

Naming Staff... Uni Foundation Completes Out-of-state Organization

Out-of-state program of the Nebraska Student Foundation is successfully organized and under way, according to Ann Craft, committee chairman.

Herbert Rosenbaum is assistant chairman and the staff for the individual states has been named. Program of the out-state workers includes contacting students in high schools in other states and informing them concerning the opportunities and facilities of the University of Nebraska. The Foundation does not interfere with state institutions of other states, but directs its program toward those who have already indicated that they contemplate attending a university outside their home state.

Apply at Union.

Any student who lives out-of-state and who would be interested in working on the staff should apply at the Foundation office on the third floor of the Union. Following are the present members of the out-of-state committee:

Illinois, Marsha Craft and Barbara Klouk, co-chairmen; Colorado, Herbert Rosenbaum, chairman, and members Shirley Anderson, Jeanne Hershorn, Gloria Rothberg, Millicent Schulz and Dorothy Ann Thornburg; Wyoming, Norma Pasternak, chairman, and members Ava Bromwich, Florence Johnson, Sallye Sears and Barbara Veta; South Dakota, Betty Hoff, chairman, and members Lorraine Rabe and Ruth Chatterton; Kansas, Dinny Ford, chairman, and assistant, Helen Fuller; and Iowa, Bonnie Calmer, chairman, and members Betty Hurwitz and Kappy Kellogg.

Former Coed Commissioned WAVE Ensign

Miss Maxine Cloidt, former student at the university has been commissioned as an ensign in the WAVES. She was head resident at the Women's Residence Halls last year, and was called a month ago for training in the naval auxiliary force.

Miss Cloidt has been at Smith College, at Northampton, Massachusetts, under intensive training. The WAVES aid the war effort by taking over many of the naval officers' non-combatant duties, and thereby releasing them for active service.
