

Horse Sense

A stumpy fellow with horn-rimmed specs just poked his nose into our Underwood and murmured: "I'm all for organizing a temporary Thank God It's Sunday Club for these Cornhuskers."

When asked for an explanation, our fat friend said that he referred to the pending Seahawk-Cornhusker struggle. We call him a dissenter and sic our staff on him. Fishback and Sherman wax their hot wrath on the dissenter, leaving him to bouncing Bobby McNutt for finishing touches.

Gone completely are the last remnants of Nebraska's once-beaten '40 stonewalling phalanx which waited so long for that person-to-person telephone call from Pasadena. Confronted by a chronic shortage of manpower, likeable Glenn Presnell is weathering the biblical cycle of the second year of Husker drouth.

Only three victories in eight starts lie on the winning side of the Husker ledger as this goes to press. Coming up for execution tomorrow is the tilt with the three-quarters pro Seahawks, victors over Notre Dame and Michigan. One week behind on the Pitt Panther greensward lies the sole Husker hope of finishing the campaign in fifty-fifty style.

By virtue of one grand coup, one victory over a favored opponent, could those Huskers redeem themselves. Only favored opponent left on the slate is the Seahawk eleven—so the redeeming measure must be taken Saturday. Kansas State's hapless club winds up the campaign a week later here in Lincoln.

No easy sledding along the schedule trail precedes the Seahawks into battle with the Huskers. Such clubs as Indiana, Michigan, Notre Dame, and Minnesota have tread the Bierman club's schedule thus far.

Despite the beef Presnell inserted in the Husker backfield for the fray, the starting Seahawk club sports a 12-pound team weight advantage. Some wit figured that the average Seahawk is 25 years old and possesses one child.

Center George Svendsen and Fullback Ed Jankowski each performed five years in pro ball after finishing their college careers at Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Nebraska's grid eleven departed for the grid wars at Iowa City this morning, prepared to meet the powerhouse Iowa Seahawks Saturday in the toughest tilt of the campaign.

Five Husker first-string performers were left at home as the team boarded the train. Injured halfbacks Al Zikmund, Marvin Athey, Henry Reichel will be left along with Jack Hazen and Jerry Kathol.

Seahawks hold a ten-pound weight advantage along the line and support an eight-pound backfield advantage. Game captains for the Huskers will be Bill Bryant and Jerry Kathol.

Frosh Elevens Meet In First Regular Game

In the annual freshman intra-squad gridiron battle, which was resumed yesterday on the frosh practice field, a far superior Army team ran over their blue shirted rivals, the Navy, 21-0.

Only four minutes after the opening kickoff the scarlet-clad Army team took over a 2-0 lead when Center Kenny Greenwood made a poor pass from center which rolled past Jim Myers over the end zone for an automatic safety. Gordon Hall's punt, which rolled dead on the Navy 3 yard line, was the method of pushing the blue-shirted men down in coffin corner.

IT'S ALWAYS IN STYLE

To Meet at the Cornhusker

Year in and year out, it's "fashionable" for all smartly attired college men and women to "start out" or "wind up" all social functions—formal or informal—at the Tasty Pastry Shop. It's simply a matter of "good taste"!
