

A Handsome Couple . . .

Mary Stevenson and Bob Durrie, Alpha Phi-Phi Gam pinmate combination are ready to start the "informal" season gaily. Mary wears a cranberry red wool coat trimmed with a black skunk tuxedo collar, Paradise shoes of black gabardine and white doeskin gloves. Her hat is a mushroom-brim black felt; her bag a black cord silk. Bob is attired in a freedom blue topcoat, and a Bailey hat of steel blue. Both costumes are, of course, from Magee's.

fellow on the floor.

We mustn't neglect the good old stand-by date dress with the full skirt and torso-length waistline coming to a point in front and back, with the skirt gathered along the waist line. This type of dress is right for every occasion including the Ball, and is a practical, must in every girls wardrobe.

For the girl who prefers a wool to silk everytime, we saw the very thing while strolling hopefully past one of the local store windows the

Government Regulations Restrict Necessary Dye

Women may have to sacrifice those beautiful red and green shoes that have been seen in such quantities lately. Due to war time regulations the dye used in their manufacture is restricted.

It will no longer be possible to get a pair of shoes to match every dress you own, instead the government has limited it to brown, black and navy blue.

But even with these restrictions there are still some nifty little numbers that would make any girls purr with delight. The trend this fall is definitely toward the platform shoe. Even in sport shoes it is found that the soles are slightly on the heavy side.

For dress there is still suede and patent leather with a slight edge on the new shoes of plastic. Regardless of some restrictions by the government it is still possible to look well shod when the occasion arises.

other day. This chic little number comes in pastel shades, has a semi-full skirt, popular three quarter length sleeves, and large novelty buttons running up the front from the waist. A perky little ruffle runs around the bottom of the skirt giving the dress just the right "dressed up" touch as it swirls gracefully around the knees.

Those who like the bolder, more striking colors will not doubt be seen in something like a patriotic red such as the two pieced little number we saw with the rolled sailor collar and accordion pleated skirt. And don't forget the old faithful flannel dress in natural or beige with a leather belt.

Salute!

The "V" for victory is being emphasized again this season in the low, daring "v" necklines, both with and without collars. For the first time in quite a while tie belts are back but this time most of the tying is done in the front. As in the past few seasons, the three-quarter length sleeve leads the popularity list followed closely by both long and elbow length sleeves.

And so off to the ball in silks and wools and everything informal. For the first time in history the Military Ball will be informal and it will break a tradition of 33 years standing. We gave up the cannon and the metal plates on buildings to the scrap drive so we can give up formals and corsages for the duration.

And speaking of corsages, don't forget that this year yours will consist of war stamps and not flowers, for you know that floral corsages are also taboo. These victory corsages are really very nice. They are made up of five twenty-five cent war stamps and held together with starred red, white and blue ribbon. They are small and will look equally well in the hair or on the dress. See you all at the Ball!

Phi Psi Tunk Schulte is set for the big date in a Harvey Bros. coat of natural colored gabardine. The set-in sleeve and fly front are popular with the campus "jokes," and that gray snap brim completes a combination designed for Nebraska's well-dressed males.

Sloppy Joes, Baggy Skirts Go on Forever

The coed's good old standby is the long, loose-fitting pullover, which, if she doesn't pull it up, falls down around her knees and trips her. Of course it hasn't been cleaned for the past three months and has evidences of the past several coke dates on it in the form of spots.

Then there's the cardigan style sweater that can be worn either coming or going providing the gal can stand the shouts of protest raised by her male companions when she wears it backwards.

Now to get down to skirts: First on the coed's hit parade is the bright green, blue, red, purple and orange number which can be worn with any colored sweatre because it has every color in it and never shows the dirt 'cause you can't tell the spots from the plaid. This little deal is either full, accordion pleated or box pleated (are there any other kinds of pleats? If so, this skirt has them).

Navigation, meteorology, map reading, celestial navigation, civil aeronautics and home economics are among new war courses at Macalester college.
