

Military Department Completes Plans For Parking 1800 Cars at Ball Tonight

Despite gas rationing and tire shortages military officials have worked out a parking system for the ball in anticipation of accommodating at least 1,800 cars. This system, designed to eliminate parking congestion and confusion, has proved successful for the last few years.

The pictured diagram shows the parking plan devised by Capt. Harland G. Pattison, infantry, and Cadet Major James H. Stuart, heads of the committee in charge of parking.

Vehicles Moved.

Motor vehicles left parked on the campus after 6:00 o'clock Friday evening will be moved to clear the parking area for the Military Ball, according to military department announcement.

All incoming traffic Friday night south of "T" street will be routed up North 14th street to Vine and then left to the coliseum as the chart indicates. Entrance to the campus on North 12th street will be blocked north of "T" street and will be closed to traffic after 6:00 p. m.

Proceed West.

After discharging passengers at the coliseum, cars will proceed west to 12th street and left into parking areas provided by the three lanes connecting 12th and 14th streets.

Official guests will have parking space reserved in front of the coliseum. Cars parking on 12th street will park facing south in three lanes.

Taxis will have space reserved along the east side of 14th street. The doorman will summon cabs for ballgoers. Assisting with parking will be traffic officers stationed at strategic positions along the campus.

British Display Map Features War's Affect on Commonwealth

. . . During This Week

One side of the library showcase is occupied this week by material sent to the library from the British information services. The rest of the case shows material released by the navy.

The feature of the British display is a large map showing the British commonwealth of nations and the type of government used in each. The lower border of the map shows the principal products of the various nations of the commonwealth. Below the map is a chart showing how England has decreased consumption of food during the war. Sugar, eggs, fruit and wine are the commodities that show the greatest decreases. Another chart depicts the increased taxes that have been placed on tobacco, tea, sugar, cigarets and matches.

The navy display contains material issued by the navy to show shortage of men trained in mathematics and physics. Two booklets used in navy refresher courses are shown. The material is published by the navy with the help of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Military Group Holds Initiation

Scabbard and Blade Initiates Forty-two Men

Forty-two members were initiated into Scabbard and Blade, honorary University military society, of the Cornhusker Wednesday night.

Thanks To PBKs At Yale, UN Plans Carolling Sunday

About 20 years ago, Phi Beta Kappa at Yale took up the business of finding and compiling Christmas carols. Since then, they have formed a carol society which has published literally hundreds of carols and which sponsors its chorus in general in an annual Christmas concert. To this group is due the general interest all over the country in carol programs.

For the third year, the University Singers, under the direction of Dr. Arthur E. Westbrook, are presenting a program of Christmas carols. It will be given in the Union on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 6, at two and again at four o'clock.

KFOR Airs Uni Book Nook Show This Afternoon

KFOR's Book Nook program, sponsored by the university library, will have an airing today at 4:45.

The new staff, composed of Betty Rhodes, commentator; Richard Proud, announcer; and Bobbette Burke, will be in charge.

They plan to give a series of illustrated talks this year, and are carrying out that intention today with a review of books suggested for Christmas gifts. Included among others will be "Balcony Empire," by Reynolds and Eleanor Parkard, and "We Took to the Woods," by Louise Dickinson Rich.

drills was the formation of a squad composed of one head warden, two alternate wardens, and a night warden. The house president was recommended as head warden, the house mother as one of the assistant wardens, and the house manager and committee to fill the other warden positions.

Force of Four.

A force of four wardens was deemed advisable in order that at least one warden should be in the house at all times since the drills after the initial Dec. 14 practice will be unannounced.

Blanks were distributed to the various house representatives at the meeting to be filled out with the names of the four wardens and returned by tonight to Mr. W. C. Harper, assistant dean of student affairs and member of the university emergency defense committee.

Throughout the drill, radios are to be left on as frequent announcements as to the progress of the drill are to be broadcast over every station. The radios will also probably duplicate the siren and the all-clear signals.

Telephones are not to be used for personal calls during the entire time so that the lines may be left free for official communication. If, however, the telephone rings during a blackout, it should be answered since the call may be from a senior warden in the district requesting a light out, or special volunteers.

Flashlight Warning.

If flashlights are used during a blackout, they must be used with caution not to point the beam of light directly out a window or at a surface which would reflect the light out into the street. Shine the beam on the floor or on walls with no windows.

The safest place to be during a raid is in a room with two walls between you and the outside, and not in a direct line with glass windows or doors. Most of the accidents in England are caused by glass blowouts instead of direct bomb hits. This principle holds true not only at home, but wherever you are.

song in group C; 120 students voted for this song, while 85 selected Dark Eyes.

The closest race was in the other selection group. Can't Get Out of This Mood barely edged out Daybreak by the narrow margin of three votes, 91 to 88. I Came Here to Talk For Joe finished third with 30 votes. Mr. Five By Five, There Are Such Things, Serenade in Blue, and Every Night About This Time received over 15 votes apiece. Eight other songs received between one and 15.

Ballots were published in the Daily yesterday and Wednesday. Voting and the turning in of the ballots to the Union check stand closed yesterday at 5 o'clock.

A noticeable increase in number of students from outside the continental United States is reported by the Catholic University of America.
