

Mexican Parasitologist Studies Here For Month . . . In Zoo Department

Advised that at Nebraska he should find a fine library on parasitological subjects, Dr. Manuel Chavarria, head of the parasitology laboratory in the Mexican department of agriculture, will spend this month studying in the university zoology department.

The Mexican government recently has taken steps to modernize its department of agriculture, and the development of its laboratories is one of those steps. Under the good-will policies of the western hemisphere nations, fellowships for the pursuit of study in other countries were provided.

Granted a fellowship study in the United States, Dr. Chavarria began his work last spring at Iowa State, interspersing study with acquiring equipment to continue later research in Mexico. His chief interest is the study of the parasites of domestic animals.

Upon his return to Mexico, Dr. Chavarria's task will be to establish a parasitology laboratory in the department of agriculture. He was accompanied here by his wife.

Eye to Future . . . Mich. Trains Students For Post War Service . . . In German Territory

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (ACP). Specialized instruction to prepare men and women for service in territories likely to be occupied or in need of assistance as a result of the war is now being offered by the University of Michigan graduate school.

Details of the program have been announced by Dr. Howard B. Calderwood, chairman of a committee which has completed arrangements. For the present, instruction will be limited to Germany, the Lowlands and countries bordering Germany on the east. When the spring term opens, a more comprehensive program, including the Far East, will be presented. Since a part of the training will be adapted to fit each student's needs, resources of all the university's schools and colleges will be utilized in presenting the program.

Each student will be intensively trained for a particular area through a study of the language, resources, customs, institutions and history of that area.

Two programs have been designed. One will cover approximately eight months and is designed for mature persons with adequate training or experience in either law, industry, finance, public utilities, education, public health, social welfare or engineering. The second program is for persons lacking such specialization and will include basic preparation in some one of the fields.

New deputy governor of the farm credit administration, James E. Wells, jr., is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

Sooner Scout Has Troubles Getting Around

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 6—Hugh McDermott, Oklahoma's veteran football scout, rode everything but a horse this past season as, plagued by war-time transportation difficulties, he fought to reach his destination on time in stadiums all over the nation.

McDermott reached the climax of his adventures during an all-night bus ride deep in the heart of Texas last October when he was trying desperately to get to Austin, Tex., in time to see the Texas-Kansas State game.

At 3 a. m. the bus rolled to a stop, engine still running. With a frustrated expression on his face, the driver arose, turned around and address his sleepy passengers.

"Does anybody here know the way to Austin?" he asked.

Later the same bus caught fire although the driver put it out with an extinguisher.
