

Alpha Chi O, Pi Phi Skits Win

Helen Johnson Is New Typical Coed

... Feature 19 In Style Show

From a military setting on a revolving stage Helen Johnson, Delta Gamma, was presented as Typical Nebraska Coed last night at the AWS sponsored Coed Follies in the Temple.

Winning sorority of the various skits presented was Alpha Chi Omega, whose skit, "Greek Freaks" was selected as the best by the judges and the audience. Pi Beta Phi was judged winner of the curtain acts, with their presentation of, "Dark Rhythm."

Use Revolving Stage.

Directly following a style show in which 19 girls modeled, the stage revolved to reveal a good-looking soldier (pasteboard, however) with an enormous drum beside him. The drum broke and TNC Helen stepped forth. She wore a white sports dress with dark Chesterfield collar.

The new TNC is a member of Tassels and is active on Student Foundation and YWCA.

Chosen the victor of this year's Follies show, Alpha Chi Omega's "Greek Freaks" featured a myth in hell, satirizing the activities and life, in general, in hell. In winning the curtain act for the second straight year, Pi Beta Phi's "Dark Rhythm," set to George Gershwin's music, presented the sorority's trio, vocalists, and various other musical artists to win them the cup.

Taking part in the style show were: June Jamieson, Adelaide Kloepper, Lois Gaden, Beverly Hoekstra, Pat McIllece, Blanche Reid, Virginia Van Nostrand, Jean Murray, Genevieve Roberts, Ann

Tri Deltas Give To Fund; Total Now $2,048

With the $25 donation of Delta Delta Delta to the war scholarship fund, the post-war fund has climbed within $500 of its this year's quota.

The total has now reached $2,048 of the $2,500 1942-43 goal. The fund will be given to university students who have had to interrupt their schooling to enter the armed forces, and will be awarded the winners after the war.

It is hoped that this plan will encourage these students to finish their university training. Winners of the scholarships will be determined by a committee composed of the alumni secretary, comptroller, chairman of the scholarship committee, and registrar.

C. F. Kettering to Address April Honors Convocation

... For Top Students

Charles F. Kettering, one of the foremost inventors in the United States, will be the speaker at the annual honors convocation it was announced today by Prof. Linus Burr Smith. The convocation will be held on April 20.

Now the vice-president of General Motors, in charge of its research laboratories division, Kettering is known as the "monkey wrench scientist."

Honor Top Students.

The convocation will honor top-ranking students in each class and student organizations whose members have maintained high scholastic averages.

Kettering has had a hand in developing Delco lighting which was a pioneering electrical system for farms; Duco paint, which reduced the time needed to paint cars from 17 days to about three hours; the Diesel engine; the hypotherm, which treats diseases by artificially induced heat; the crankcase ventilator; Ethyl gasoline; and the self-starting motor.

Doing Research Work.

Kettering is a graduate of Ohio State university and is 66 years of age. He is now doing research "to find out why grass is green." He has contributed large sums of money for the study of photosynthesis at Antioch college, Ohio.

The convocation committee includes ten faculty members and three students. The faculty members: Mr. Smith, Miss Mabel Lee, Loring Blake, H. C. Filley, C. S. Hamilton, C. M. Hicks, Dwight Kirsch, W. Release Additional ERC Names

Call 171 Students; Meet Today at 4

Bringing the total number of university men called to active service in the enlisted reserve corps to 315, a final list of 171 members of the ERC was released today by T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs, who announced a special instructional meeting for all newly enlisted men today at 4 p. m. in Temple.

Attendance is voluntary, but it is suggested that those who have received their call, and others interested, attend. Dean Thompson, Col. J. P. Murphy, PMS&T and members of the military department will discuss matters of interest. (SEE ERC, Page 4.)

Due To Early Call ... Cancel ERC Dance

Since members of the ERC are being called with greater rapidity than was anticipated, Innocents' society and the war council found it advisable to cancel plans for the ERC "going-away" party and dance originally scheduled for Wednesday, March 17.

According to Dean Thompson, the last of the list will receive their orders today when the last names are announced. Most of these men will leave the university before the date set for the dance.

It is impossible to obtain the services of an orchestra for this weekend, and a Monday night dance would interfere with organized house meetings. "So instead of another all-university ceremony, ERC men will be given the individual good luck wishes, concluded Bill Thornberg, president of the Innocents when he announced the canceling of the dance plans.

Norris Pleads For 'Just Peace' In ERC Convocation Address

A great philosophy of altruism and generosity in the planning of peace after World War II was prescribed by Nebraska's great statesman, former Senator George W. Norris, today as he spoke at a university convocation honoring some 340 UN students who are being called to active duty as members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps.

"We must purify our hearts and purify our souls for a just peace," said the venerable Norris as he spoke directly to the ERC students. "I we do, then we will be worthy, my soldier friends, of that peace which you have won."

'Meet Enemies Equally.'

Norris explained that a peace which is perpetual should be the aim of the allied nations. "In making the peace plans, we must meet our enemies on an equal level. We must forget revenge and expunge hatred from our hearts. At the peace table, we must have an attitude of fraternal feelings to all peoples of the earth."

As he mounted the speaker's platform in the coliseum with tears in his eyes, he said in an emotion voice that when people wanted anything done and accomplished in a hurry they called upon the younger generation to do it. He applied the remark both to the war and to the hurried-up efforts of campus student leaders to organize the convocation in a few hours. The entire student body and faculty and towns people crowded the coliseum to pay respects to the ERC students and to Senator Norris.

Preceding Norris's address, Chancellor C. S. Boucher spoke briefly, praising the co-operation of the student body at the university. To the enlisted men who are to leave soon, he said, "This is a sad, yet glorious occasion. This war is being fought to protect a form of life that is worth living. God bless you on your mission." Presiding over the convocation was Pat Chamberlin, president of the War Council. Col. James P. Murphy, commandant of the university ROTC, also spoke.

Idealistic Peace.

Speaking further of peace plans, Norris spoke of an idealistic peace "not for ourselves alone, nor for our enemies alone, but for the hundreds of millions of our children and our enemies' children who are yet unborn." Our enemies' unborn children as well as our own unborn children, are innocent of this war which he termed a "crime against civilization itself."

Most opposition for an ideal peace will come from persons right here within the United States, said the former senator. On disarmament plans, Norris said that our enemies must be subjected to an unconditional disarmament. In time, allied nations will have to disarm gradually.

Norris cited as unpatriotic those who do hinder, either by action or speech, the war effort. Crying for allegiance and whole-hearted support of President Roosevelt and our other leaders, Norris said that "As far as I am able to see, and under God I have tried to see through conditions, I think that the president and those under him have done a magnificent job."

The convocation was the first ceremony that has been held by the student body at the university for students who have departed for active duty. Prior to the convocation, a rally to the coliseum was headed by the ROTC military band.
