From March 23 to 26 . . . Navy Interviews Applicants

Included among the 479 colleges and universities eligible for use in one or more kind of army-navy program, are Nebraska's facilities in military engineering, medical, dental, and pre-medical and pre-dental training.

The joint committee for the selection of non-federal educational institutions, which was appointed to select the colleges and universities to be utilized in the specialized war training programs of the armed forces has recently completed its list of approved institutions.

That Nebraska has been chosen as a possible government institution in all six fields means merely that it has been approved for inspection and investigation.

Sign Contracts.

A special release from the office of War Information, stated, "It should be clearly understood that approval of educational institutions for the war training programs means only that the indicated branch of the services is permitted to investigate the designated institutions with a view to negotiating contracts. Actual contracts will be let only to those institutions whose facilities, upon inspection, prove acceptable to the designated branch of the armed services and in the event that the proposed contracts are

UN Offers Extension Courses For Students in Armed Forces

University authorities are urging all students called to the armed services to continue their college work after they have begun training.

The university extension division and the army institute are co-operating to give men called into the services an opportunity to continue their college work. A system has been developed in which these men may apply the credits they earn thru this cor-log. The government is so interested in continuation of college work that it is willing to pay as much as one half of the correspondence study.

Students who are interested in this plan may ask for information from Dr. Patterson, Dr. K. O. Broady, director of the university extension division, or Dr. G. W. Rosenlof, director of admissions and university examiner.

In order to clear up the situation concerning the credits of students who have been called during this semester, Dr. Rosenlof pointed out that the university senate approved a specific recommendation coming from the war emergency committee that a student in good standing forced to withdraw from the university because of his being called into the armed forces would be privileged to inquire into the possibility of securing some credit.

Blanks may be obtained from the registrar's office for the use of students who wish to make application for possible partial credit for work already completed.

It is also pointed out by Dr. Rosenlof that students may continue thru extension certain of the courses for which they are registered and upon the completion of the work that normally would be required, would receive full credit.

Finally, he pointed out that students called after eight weeks are entitled to receive one half of their credits providing they have maintained a record of 70 percent or better. If called up after twelve weeks, they are entitled to receive full credit for courses for which they are registered.

Hold Registration Monday--Friday

... In Union

University women will register from Monday to Friday, 2:30 to 5:30 p. m. in the Union lobby, for their place in the women's war activity program sponsored by the War Council. Approval of the measure has been passed thru the office of the Dean of Women. Catherine Wells is chairman of the drive.

Each girl must register the number of hours of class work, employment and extra-curricular activity which she is carrying. These hours will be taken into consideration when she registers. A board of faculty and student members will weigh each case.

On Reserve List.

If it is not possible for a girl to arrange weekly hours, she may be put on a reserve list which will be called upon by the Red Cross for part-time jobs. Those not registering during this period will be contacted.
