

Party Line

BY JUDGE MASON.

There's nothing quite so shattering to the morale of a society writer than to sit at her typewriter with exactly one piece of news to fill twelve inches. Maybe by the time we get through elongating that one piece of news some kind person will have wandered in to spare you a "McNutterized" autobiography.

News: The recently activated ROTC are beginning to get their heads together to choose a Love library queen. Apparently this diversion was created in order to fill up the "free" time which the boys proverbially have on their hands. The present plan is to choose the girl from pictures submitted by the fellows. Note: we wondered when John Day would start politics at the library.

We Tour the Campus.

Well that news is exhausted and nine inches to go. Perhaps a trip up to the grill will bring some exciting results.

Sure enough; who should we meet but Addie Kloepper and Madge Haecker fresh out of Scarlet Fever quarantine, and looking for new worlds to conquer. Another interesting sight greeting our eyes was Bob James sitting with his former fiance's younger sister. Wonder what the serious-looking discussion was about.

Five inches to go, so until more news comes our way we have some very important information concerning your conduct during a blackout.

1. If in a class when you hear the air raid sirens, lead your prof to the nearest manhole and seal it up after he's entered. Just tell him it's an air raid shelter.

2. If you see any unexploded small bombs pick them up and shake them. They may just be stuck. If they still don't go off, take them back to the cashier and get your money back.

3. Be sure to put all the lights in the house on. But make sure the light in the ice box is out! It may show the bombers a good target.

By this time you're sure to have recognized the source of these instructions so we had best get to some original and timely news.

More Officers . . .

Congratulations to the new Sigma Chi president, Ed Faytinger and the new ATO president, Findley Burch Howard.

It seems that Jean Wochner, Alpha Xi will be doing her patriotic duty Saturday night to keep up the morale of Cadet Bob Randall, Phi Gam from Seattle.

The army has had too much of the limelight already, so we'll bring in the Navy with Jack Wright, Beta, who is returning to Lincoln to see Sarah Webster, Pi Phi.

Last but far from least are the latest pinnings. DG Susie Kirkland now wears Dean Forke's DU pin and Barbara Townsend, same sorority, has the Farm House pin of Ruben Heermann.

standing at ease; waiting to march to chow . . . once in the Union, we stood in line outside of what used to be the Pan-American room . . . Let's see, what will I have for dinner tonight; may I have a menu please? Oh, I beg your pardon! I forgot those were civilian privileges . . . oh well, it was a darned good meal though . . . march back to barracks . . . such a life for a dogface . . . now we have to draw bed clothes for our beds . . . What's a square corner anyway . . . and so to study hall, er, that place to catch up on some of the latest humor.

Trying to borrow your buddy's book proved to no avail when it was discovered that over half of the privates had not as yet purchased them. An so with taps, our first five hours of "specialized training" ended, but not without a trot or two down three or four flights of steps to wash and brush your teeth, and maybe a friendly game of "army dominoes" before the curfew.

Additions to the plane of Northwestern university in the last six years are as great as all additions made in the previous 85 years.

Wilson college has established a neighborhood play center in basement rooms formerly used for storage purposes.
