

Muddling Through

With
John C. Bentley

I must say, that this week's football results turned out as was expected. With but the smallest number of upsets and surprises, it was a dopesters hey-day. (This does not include yours truly, however, as I just keep right on muddling along.) The vaunted Irish rapped a gallant Navy by a bigger score than most of us would have imagined, so naturally, they are now higher up the list as the "bestest ever" than before. The loss (and altho a tie, it must be considered a loss) of the army to a "fightin'" Pennsylvania was perhaps the most surprising feature of the week. And, it just goes to prove, that altho a team may be the best one week, they may be beaten by the worst the next week. Anyway, to get back to affairs, the 13 to 13 tie that Army drew from Penn puts them down the list, and is rather a gloomy prediction of just what the Irish should do to the West Pointers.

However, saying something like that is just sticking out your neck. Every week, new Navy and Marine transfers take place, boys are taken from school on a moment's notice—its just a very unpredictable affair. Suppose that next week or this week the Navy were to call up all of the boys from Notre Dame for immediate duty or transfer them to Columbia or someother school. Well, you can see what I mean. The Irish wouldn't be worth a plugged Colorado Tax Token and the fortunate school that got the cream would be the best team in the nation. It is to horrible to even think of. (That is from a sports writers angle.)

The Big Six has developed into a two way race, with the Missouri Tigers and the Oklahoma Sooners, both undefeated in conference play, gunning for first place honors, and Nebraska, Iowa State, and Kansas fighting it out for second. That leaves Kansas State holding the bag anyway you look at it; however, a victory over the Huskers next week would leave them both holding the gunny, ably aided by Kansas university.

The way things could turn out, we might find one champ, and five last place teams in the conference this year, but it is very unlikely, the way things are looking now. It would seem that the Tigers will have clear sailing this season, right up to the finish, unless some of those transfers, that I was talking about, take place in the near future.

If you are not as confused by now as I am, then it ain't my fault. This sports writing is a dogs life. "Move over Fido, move over, and let me have some room in this kennel."

Intermurals Reach Hot Finish In Champ Race

Both men and women intermurals wound up their first round of activities this week with plenty of spirit and fire. With the championship playoffs drawing to a close this week, interest and excitement was high, and all of the games were hotly battled. In the men's division, the playoff of the game for the Football Championship ended in a tie, and the Sig Chis will have to meet the ATOs again this Thursday to hash a rematch out for the championship. The Delta Gammas won a rough and tough game from the Pi Phis to decisively take the Soccer Baseball Championship.

Men's Intermurals.

The football playoffs became hot and fast, as all of the teams went into the final playoffs, with all of them trying to annex top honors. Most of the games were decided in extra periods, or at least not until the final minutes.

In Tuesday's games, the Beta Sigs defeated the Betas by a score of 12 to 6. The game was hard fought from start to finish, and it was not until a last minute pass, that a two quarter deadlock was broken.

In the other Tuesday game, the Sigma ZBTs defeated the Sig Eps in another close battle by a score of 8 to 6. Both teams played good ball, and an extra quarter was needed to decide the winner.

Thursday, the ATOs and the Sig Chis met to decide the championship. However, this game resulted in a 6 to 6 tie, even though an extra quarter was played. Both of these teams are first class, and the game should be an interesting event, when they meet again this Thursday, November 4, to replay the championship game.

Tuesday, November 2, the Beta Sigs met the Sigma ZBTs for the consolation playoffs.

WOMEN'S INTERMURALS.

After a hard fought tournament, the Delta Gammas defeated the Pi Phis 7-4 in the finals to win the soccer baseball championship in women's intermurals. The semi-
