

Muddling Through

With
John C. Bentley

The Army and Notre Dame game in Yankee Stadium was enough to convince me that this Irish outfit is the best ball club that ever crawled into pads and moleskins. Any and all doubt that I might have had was definitely smashed to smithereens.

Now that is a pretty broad statement to make, cause even if you are only thinking of past Irish teams, there are plenty of better than any before outfits. And then there are some fine old and new Michigan, Minnesota, and California, and Southern California teams to be reckoned with, but I'm still convinced, but thoroughly. Even in remembering the Great Gipper and company, the Four Horsemen, the "They shall not pass" boys of California, and the Mighty '09 Michigan band, I'm convinced.

Just defeating another Army team today did not prove to me that they were hot, but defeating what was supposed to be the greatest (or near greatest) Army team was enough. You remember, don't you, that this was supposed to be the best Army team in history? And, no doubt it was. They played a gallant, hard, and stupendous game, but as the scoreboard says, not nearly as gallant, hard, or stupendous as the Irish, and that is what counts.

Particularly outstanding, and shining for the Army, was one Glen Davis, who did about everything but sell hot dogs to the spectators.

There is one thing about the game, though, that goes further to convince me that Notre Dame is great any day, or any year, and that is the oft referred to "Luck of the Irish." Always when the chips are down, and the wheel of fortune is spinning, it is the South Benders that come up with the fumble, or have the penalty called in their favor. Skill, desire, guts, knowledge, and pure luck are a bunch of virtues that when they are wrapped up into one, are hard to beat, mighty hard. The Irish certainly have them all. Or do you remember that Army game three years ago, or the Ohio State game five years ago? Those clipping penalties, offsides, recovered penalties, 70 yard passes, and 80 yard runs just seem to happen at the right time for the Irish. Those last three touchdowns in two and a half minutes to win, 21 to 20, they are just sheer luck. Or, brother, are they. No, it's just plain old good football.

ZIKMUND WITH NAVY.

Allen Zikmund, who spent many a thrilling Saturday afternoon carrying the pigskin for Nebraska, is now helping carry the victory ball for the Navy.

Ensign Zikmund has been assigned to the executive department of the Navy midshipmen's school in New York. He is residing at 549 West 113th Street, New York.

"Zik" graduated from the Navy school on Oct. 20. He was one of seven to earn a Royal Navy Sword, awarded American students by the British, for outstanding scholastic records.

YWCA Cabinet Battles Elements Over Weekend

It was a beautiful fall evening Friday—just the kind for hayrides, weeny roasts and retreats. Then came the dawn. And with the dawn came a real Nebraska unexpected downpour.

Hayriders had their rides, picnickers ate their weenies, but what about the girls who wanted to retreat into the woods and enjoy the open fires, fresh air and spaciousness of the WAA cabin?

For a while it looked as if the ten YWCA cabinet members would be forced to enjoy the secluded empty spaces surrounding the cabin. The heavy rain early Saturday morning made traveling on the dirt road difficult. But Husky Hohf and Muscles Daithorp headed the rescue party which pushed three cars onto the highway after an hour's struggle.

Notre Dame's one-hundredth commencement, to be held on Oct. 29, will be the last formal commencement for the duration. Degrees will be awarded to 200 men.
