Xmas Letters Swamp Mortar Boards After Postal Holiday

The plight of the poor Mortar Boards this morning! The mail service was discontinued yesterday due to the fact that it was a national holiday so all of those letters from campus males, military and civilian, will come pouring into the MBs for two days, this morning.

And the letters are literally pouring in, and lots and lots more are wanted. The women of the Black Masque want to know just exactly the description of the girls each and every man attending this university would like to find in his "Christmas Stocking."

Of course, the winners will be presented with free tickets to the "Christmas Ball" as well as the coed who best fits their description at intermission.

Here are a couple more letters from hopefuls who have sent in word pictures of "their ideals."

Dear Santa:
I want a girl. It's a rare request, or I guess was a rather rare request, but this year things are different. Not being GI, I still long for an article of glamour, like, say a girl! That's it Santa, a Stocking Girl. Give her oomph, Santa. Make sure she's a front burner, cooking with unrationed gas. Have her with luscious, light catching hair, eyes of—of Aegean blue, sparkling with an occasional glint of sunlight, and looking for the world like she was poured into a sweater. Her height must be average—(say close to five foot five.) And from any house.
Bernie.

Dearest Santa:
She should be—well just about that height, with ash blonde or raven black air. She must be a superb dancer, conversationalist, and intermissionist. She should give her undivided attention to me and let good looking men pass by. She must be witty and be able to give as well as take (I hate to do all the work). She must, above all, get a town permit by hook or by crook, because I just get "on the beam" (war council plug) about 12:30!
Pass the scapel, nurse, I'm going to operate!
Willie Kissner.

More letters tomorrow!

"Letters to Lucerne" Lacks Polish But Is Impressive

BY JANET MASON.

For those of you who have not seen "Letters to Lucerne," I cannot possibly evaluate it for you because it will affect every person differently. Although the acting, as a whole, is not exceptional, Dorothy James, as Olga, brings out something which is very close to greatness in her part. One thrilling moment, like this, makes it too easy for a reviewer to overlook the unsatisfactory places.

With this in mind, I shall attempt to give you my personal opinion of Berne Enslin's first UN production.

Impressive Production.

It was not a polished production. Perhaps, lack of time, energy spent on rejuvenating shamefully poor scenery, and narrowness of cast to choose from, were all factors responsible for this. It was not a polished production, yet it was impressive.

Janice Marx's interpretation of Erna, the German girl, was moving, although defective. Her accent was the result of too little study on too many accents, causing a confusion of pronunciation which often became inarticulate. She took too much time, in the beginning, to get into character; she picked up her cues so fast, at times, that they stepped on the former speaker's line; and she was over-dramatic in many natural situations.

And yet, when her big moment came, she eased into character so simply and beautifully that the effect was astounding. It takes a good actress to carry an emotional scene and there can be no doubt but that Janice has the makings of such an actress. The understand-

Engineers Hold Annual Ball

Contrary to tradition the engineers will hold the Engineers' Ball in the fall of the year instead of the spring. The dance will be held in the Union ballroom and feature Earl Gardner's orchestra.

The ball will replace a banquet and ball which have been held in the past in the spring of each year as a climax to Engineer week. "The orchestra is supposed to be one of the best of the local ones" assures Eldon Mathauser who is in charge of publicity for the ball. "It does have over 13 pieces."

Engineer Exec. Board Sponsor. The dance is sponsored by the Engineering Executive Board which consists of two representative from each engineering college. The committee in charge of the dance are Eldon Mathauser, and Louis Holt, who are in charge of the entertainment.

At $1 per ticket including tax, only 250 tickets will be sold. "Selling is good," according to Mathauser, "and no tickets will be sold at the door."

The Executive Board are selling tickets. They may be found in any of the engineering buildings, particularly Mechanical Arts. They are Glen Hennings, Leo M. Keller, Harry T. Teshima, Ivan Boumgart, George Nagata, Everett A. Eydin, Charles A. Stutt, Horace V. Jensen, Howard R. Walters, Levi E. Arhart, John P. Schluckebier. Soldiers who are interested in buying tickets should contact one of the committee members.

Fraternities Hold Dance in Union

Friday night will see fraternity members coming into their own at the interfraternity ball in the Union ballroom. One hundred and fifty couples will swing out to all the famous abnds that the nickelodian can furnish.

In former years the interfraternity ball has been one of the high spots of the university social season with a name band and the presentation of the Fraternity Sweetheart. This year fraternities find their memberships depleted so that it is difficult to sponsor social functions singly. Therefore they are launching a co-operative social plan whereby the fraternities will coordinate their social functions. This interfraternity dance is the first affair to fall under the new plan.
