

Uni Professors Take Part in KFAB Forum

Can the United Nations be United? is the inaugural topic of the "University of Nebraska Forum of the Air" as it begins its weekly discussions Saturday at 5 p. m. over KFAB. Participating in the first discussion will be Dr. David Fellman, who will serve as moderator, Dr. J. L. Sellers, Dr. J. O. Hertzler and Dr. Norman L. Hill, all of the UN faculty.

The program will endeavor to present weekly discussions on timely topics of faculty members, students, and persons selected from outside the university. December 18 the topic will be "After the War: Inflation or Deflation?" Professor Karl Arndt of the economics department will serve as moderator.

Present Student Views

A presentation of student views on post war foreign policy with Dr. L. T. Laase as moderator has been tentatively scheduled for the third program. The fourth program will endeavor to discuss the question of post war agriculture. Participants will be selected from the ag faculty.

"Aim of the radio committee is to seek every opportunity to present problems and points of view of especial interest to Nebraska," according to Dr. K. O. Broady, chairman of the faculty radio committee. The programs will not in any way constitute official university presentations. Opinions expressed will be those of the individual participants. Dr. Broady pointed out.

Sororities Lead 'On the Beam' For This Week

Three sororities, Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Pi Beta Phi, head the "On the Beam" committee list for this week's war activities.

Alpha Xi Delta and Delta Gamma fell to the bottom of the list in war activities, but only four fraternities handed in any reports. These fraternities, under trying conditions, are doing all they can to contribute to the drives. The other fraternities have not handed in any reports whatsoever.

Every sorority is co-operating on the drives, including such activities as collecting women's shoes, conserving electricity, buying war stamps and collecting newspapers.

Dr. Whitney Lectures At Sigma Xi Meeting

Dr. David D. Whitney, chairman of the department of zoology, will give an illustrated lecture on the role of environment and heredity on physical traits in man in Morrill hall auditorium next Tuesday evening at 7:30. The meeting, sponsored by Sigma Xi, honorary scientific fraternity, is open to all students.

Remedy Defects.

The lecture will deal with the influence of environment on man, the equal influence of heredity and environment when the two are acting together, and the cases in which heredity has a much greater influence than environment. Dr. Whitney will also show how many defects may be remedied by modern medicine and surgery.

Dr. Whitney has recently studied some of the rare family cases. These cases, as well as many others which are better known, are of considerable interest as they are probably found in many communities in Nebraska.

Teaches Genetics.

Having taught genetics in the department of zoology for many years, Dr. Whitney is qualified to speak on this subject. He has written a number of articles pertaining to genetics which have been published in the "Journal of Heredity" and in "Genetics," and is the author of the book, "Family Treasures," which is a study of inheritance of normal characteristics of man.
