Stuarts Give Scholarship For Agriculture to UN

In honor of the late Charles Stuart, outstanding Lincoln business man, his sons, Charles T. and James Stuart, have created a $5,000 scholarship fund to be used at ag college, according to Perry W. Branch, secretary of the University Foundation.

To be known as the Charles Stuart Memorial Scholarship in agriculture, the annual award will go to the male student who has satisfactorily completed one academic year and who is in need of aid. The scholarship committee at ag college administers the award.

Income Maintains Award.

The donors have turned the $5,000 over to the foundation to be invested in compliance with rules and regulations of the foundation, with the net income to be used to maintain the scholarship. The donors reserve the right to increase the award or to change the provisions or the conditions of the scholarship.

"In such a scholarship it is our aim to honor our father's memory with something that is in line with one of his greatest interests," Charles T. Stuart said. "As the owner of farm properties in the state, our father always was devoted to various programs for development of Nebraska's agricultural resources. The encouragement of young men to study at our agricultural college is one of the best ways to contribute to this field."

Charles T. Stuart is connected with the Stuart Investment company and James Stuart, now an officer in the army, is also with the Stuart company.

Donations, Pledges Total $2558.77

Jimmie Howe, director of the AUF, first drive for WSSF and Rags for Servicemen, announced today that from pledges and cash contributions the AUF netted $2,558.77, which is way over its $2,300 goal and may possibly exceed this total when pledges are collected Dec. 20 and Jan. 15.

All sororities, fraternities, co-ops and boarding houses, religious organizations, ag campus, organization—WAA, War Council, Tassels, AWS, Mortar Board,—and soldiers gave generously.

Soldiers Contribute.

Soldiers alone gave $70 of their own initiative and were not asked to sign pledges. Jane Stroud was in charge of this collection.

U. S. Marines Consider Uni ROTC Men

Seven former Nebraska first year advanced ROTC men now stationed in Love library, are under consideration for appointments in the Marine Corps. Upon the request of the war department and as a furtherance of the nominations submitted by Chancellor Boucher and Col. J. P. Murphey as PMS and T, the army and university records of the seven men have been sent to proper army officials with the view of submitting them to the marine authorities.

The seven men are Pfc. John Ward Watson, Paul Sigurd Johrde, Richard Mickey Green, Rogers Scribner Gannell, Robert Louis Sorensen, Mark Cromwell Hargrave, jr., and Raynold Jacob Sedlak.

Four UN Openings.

Fifty such appointments are open, at least four of which may be filled by Nebraska men. The military efficiency ratings, character ratings, and grade in school and military subjects from the time they were basics have been submitted for the seven men.

Colonel Murphy reported that "Grades in all cases were excellent and far above the average run."

To be eligible, the men must have received their ROTC training in the services, have successfully completed three years chemical or mining engineering, and have had 13 to 17 weeks of basic training.

First Nighters Laud Acting In Gay Comedy 'Hay Fever'

BY JANET MASON.

Yes, it was rather confusing! When one wasn't too overcome with laughter, he found himself in the same rollicking situation as the four unfortunate guests who came to visit the Bliss summer home, in the University Theater play, "Hay Fever."

"Rollicking situation" is a mild way of describing Wednesday's opening of Noel Coward's comedy, which kept the audience in hysterics for a good part of the evening. Janice Marx equaled last year's brilliant performance in "Arsenic and Old Lace" with her portrayal of Judith Bliss in "Hay Fever." Her dramatic characterization of the retired actress and the quick changes of mood and facial expressions which she employed "took the cake" for the evening's performance.

Life with the Bliss's.

Involved in a mad mix-up of household affairs, four week end guests sneaked, screamed and ploughed their way thru a hectic day of social life with the Bliss family.

It all started when each member of the family unknown to the others invited a guest out for the week end and following events found the guests thrown around to the point where each ended up with another member of the family than the one who invited him. The next morning saw all four guests sneaking out of the house together.

Complimentary Comments.

Comments on the play, from the audience, were unanimously complimentary. Mrs. Elvera Christiansen, of the university faculty, thought "Richard Greatham and Myra Arundel were especially good." Greatham, the English diplomat, was played by Bill Major, and Becky Silver portrayed Myra Arundel, the sophisticated guest.

A beautiful and vivacious new addition to the University Players proved her ability in the role of Sorel Bliss. She was Pat King, a freshman who will probably be seen often around the theater in the future.

Upholding the popular belief that "a small part is as great as you want to make it," was Blanche Duckworth, as Clara, the maid. Her rude and abrupt manners

Palladians Elect Robert Veach Prexy

New officers for Palladian literary society were elected at the regular meeting last Monday night and will be installed next Monday to serve for the coming year.

Bob Veach will take over duties as president while Elizabeth Snell serves as vice-president and Genevieve Mullen will hold the office of critic. Marjorie Holmes and Mary Ann Sherman will be recording secretary and corresponding secretary. Program chairman is Janet Hutchinson. Mildred Engstrom was elected treasurer.

Williams Speaks.

T. F. A. Williams, Lincoln attorney and Palladian alumnus, spoke to both the active and alumni Palladians at a program last Saturday night. The occasion was the annual active-alumni program. Theme for the evening was "Blue Room." Musical numbers were provided by the active members.

AWS Vocational Talk Explains Life in Navy

Life in the navy for both men and women was discussed and explained in speeches and movies at the navy mixer, sponsored by AWS Wednesday in the Union.

Recruiter Specialist Sandrock spoke on the WAVES in place of Yeoman First-class Virginia Ash and Ensign Lois Swabel, who were unable to participate in the program because of illness.

Specialist Sandrock explained the two classes of WAVES, the V-9 class, for enlisted women, and the V-10 class for officers. To be eligible for officers' training the applicant must have either two years of college or the equivalent of two years of business training. He stressed that women should not quit college to enlist, that they should graduate before entering the WAVES.

Explains Reserves.

Enlistment in the WAVE reserve was also explained. It is possible now for a woman to enlist in the reserve and finish her academic year before induction.

Officer candidates are chosen not only for scholastic rating, but for their leadership ability, activities while in school and personalities.

Two movies, "Eyes of the Navy," showing the entire training program followed by aviation cadets, and "Women in Blue" were shown during the mixer.

December Quota Filled.

According to a release from the navy department branch public relations office, the WAVES' quota for December has been filled in this area, as announced by Lt. Com. W. J. Amoss, officer in charge of WAVES procurement for Iowa and Nebraska. "Young women who enlist in the navy any time this month may be assured of spending the holidays with their families," Lieutenant Commander Amoss stated, "for in no
