

Bizad Review Discusses Post-War Freight Rates

According to the current business review of the college of business administration, business planning in the post-war world in Nebraska must recognize that certain industries will prosper or wither in this state in accordance with possible developments in the field of freight rates.

Freight rates as they exist are the outcome of contests between the claims of economic groups and economic areas, the review points out, and the statement that there is any science in rates "is a fiction."

In discussing current investigations of rate problems, the review supports the stand of Nebraska chambers of commerce against the Chicago demand for a reduction in rates on carload lots of mixed commodities brought into the state.

Jobbers Important Group in State.

While the reduction sought might bring a small reduction in some prices to consumers, the "position of the commercial interests of the state is frank and understandable," the review says. "The jobbers doing business in Nebraska constitute one of the most important business groups in the state. The condition which permits them to do business is the margin of cost enjoyed by one who can ship articles into Nebraska in full carload quantities, and this margin would be impaired with respect to a very large part of the available field of redistribution of the proposed change in rule were adopted."

The review also discusses the rate differential on classified freight between the west and the area lying east of the Mississippi-Illinois rivers and north of the Ohio-Potomac river lines.

Because of this differential, it is explained, Nebraska manufacturers, with the exception of certain groups receiving commodity rates, look westward instead of eastward for their outlets.

Theta Sigs Aid USO

Nebraska chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, woman's national honorary journalism fraternity, inaugurated a news bureau in the Lincoln USO headquarters Friday night, Dec. 10, for the purpose of keeping the folks at home informed as to the activities of their boys in the armed services.

Designed to furnish home town newspapers with items of interest about their men and women in the service, the news bureau will maintain a booth in the Lincoln USO club every Friday night from 7:30 to 10 where service men may report their stories to the Theta Sigma Phis in charge.

After receiving all the information necessary for the story, the girls will type it and send it to the editor of the newspaper or newspapers in the soldier's home town.

According to reports from Chicago, St. Louis, Washington, D. C., and Omaha, where similar news bureaus are maintained by Theta Sigma Phis, the project has been received enthusiastically by the service men and women. In Omaha interviews are conducted by Theta Sigma Phi alumnae at the railroad station instead of the local USO.
