

Spring Drill Details Will Be Released

By Lewandowski

More detailed information in regard to spring football practice, which opens a week from today, will be announced by head grid coach A. J. Lewandowski. No word beyond the fact that practice sessions will start April 5 and run thruout the month has been released as yet.

Details as to the hours of practice, checking out of equipment, and general nature of the practice sessions will be included in the forthcoming announcement.

Lew Optimistic.

Coach Lewandowski is displaying his customary optimism as he plans the spring workouts. With five veterans—Bert Gissler, Frank Hazard, Buzz Hollins, Lyle Kops and Jim Abdnor—ready to report and several other capable performers definitely planning to check out equipment, Lew has high hopes for a good turnout.

Joe Kessler, Wayne back, who was declared ineligible for play last fall on the eve of the season opener with Minnesota, will play a big part in the spring drills. Rated as one of the top backs on the squad before his loss last season, Kessler will be readied for the quarterback spot.

With Kessler at quarter and Buzz Hollins in the fullback slot, the Huskers have the nucleus of a powerful backfield. Hollins' offensive power was one of the highlights of the '43 season, and big Buzz should be all the better for a year's experience.

Fans Welcome Spring Drills.

Lewandowski's decision to hold spring drills this year has drawn many favorable comments from UN students and fans, the majority of whom seem to agree that football definitely should be kept alive at Nebraska. The fact that there will be spring practice is regarded by Husker followers as a concrete indication that Nebraska will field a team next fall.

The Hilltop Press, student newspaper at Cortland State Teachers college, Cortland, New York, featured a college seal design. Cortland, through its history as both a normal school and college, has never had a seal.

All-American Ranking Goes To Allie Paine

NORMAN, Okla., March 27.—Allie Paine, who more than any player Coach Bruce Drake ever tutored, typifies the Oklahoma coach's theory that basketball is a game of thinking and finesse, has been selected with four players from the Big Ten conference area on Pic magazine's 1944 All-American team.

The Oklahoma team this year was the most youthful in the university's history, with three freshmen on the starting five. Few critics took the Sooners seriously, Iowa State's veteran aggregation almost everywhere being conceded the Big Six conference title. Moreover, the green Oklahoma team, with no players of unusual height, lost three of its first four December games.

Then the young Sooners discovered that a captain could help them. With Paine ably transmitting Coach Drake's insistence upon ball control, Oklahoma swept the Oklahoma City all-college tournament, won 15 of its last 20 games.

Iowa State Loss Ends Big Six Bid For Cage Honors

The final Big Six bid for national basketball honors ended last Saturday night at Kansas City when Iowa State's Cyclones, conference co-champs, dropped a 40-31 tilt to the University of Utah in the Western finals of the National Collegiate Athletic association's annual tourney.

The Cyclones had knocked off Pepperdine college of Los Angeles the night before in the first round to earn the right to meet the Utes in the finals. Missouri's Tigers, other Big Six representative in the Western play-offs, lost to Utah 45-35 in the first round.

Utah now travels to New York City to clash with Dartmouth, eastern N.C.A.A. champs, for the national title.
