Wet Practice Field Holds UN Gridders Inside

Still held indoors by the spongy condition of their practice field, Coach Ad Lewandowski's Huskers continued their drills on passing, ball handling, and offensive formations in their workout under the east stadium yesterday afternoon.

The Huskers are stressing the T-formation and the single wingback in their offensive drills, which thus far have emphasized a passing attack. The Scarlet offense thus seems to be following the pattern laid down by Lewandowski last fall, when the Huskers alternated the T and the single wing and depended heavily on passes for their scoring punch.

Hollins, Nelson Please.

Especially pleasing to Lewandowski in recent workouts have been the passing Buzz Hollins, who seems set for a triple-threat role next fall, and the receiving of Doug Nelson, whose speed and pass-snagging ability have boosted him to the wingback spot on Lew's first eleven. Joe Kessler continues to hold the quarterback spot in the first backfield, while the tailback post is still an open race.

Lewandowski had hoped to move his charges outdoors yesterday but decided shortly before practice time not to risk tearing up the spongy turf on the outdoor play yard. Outdoor sessions will resume Monday if the weekend brings no further rain.

In the student council election for ag college member on the council, Midge Holtzschler and Edith Pumphrey tied with 28 votes each. Edith Pumphrey led in the votes cast at ag, but when ag votes were tabulated with votes cast by ag students on the city campus, there was a tie. The tie will be decided in the near future, according to council president Lois Christie.

There was also a tie in the pharmacy college vote between Stanley Andelt and H. J. Norman. Since both were write-in candidates, their eligibility has not been checked. If both are eligible, the council will decide between the two.

Seniors Get Top Vote.

The largest number of votes cast in any group was in the election of seniors at large to the council, in which all candidates together polled 1,603 votes. Second high number of votes was 547 in the arts and science college. The 829 total voters in this election is slightly under the total for the election last fall.

On the ballots on city campus, 610 voters designated the union party, 194 barb, and approximately 25 votes were cast without party designation.
