

Freshman Gives Views Of UN Life---Classes, Men, What Not

Freshman life on the campus is—well—is there a worthy adjective? It's wonderful, exciting, out-of-this-world, but "oh, those classes!" First year students, better known as "eager-beavers" come to college firmly convinced that the only bright spot in life will be an occasional date to break the monotony of classes, studies and "book larnin'" in general. To their surprise, the mighty professors feared from afar turn out to be regular fellows and worth a few laughs; incidentally teaching you what you're here to learn in the most interesting of ways!

Admitted that the homework is a trifle rough, but after all, haven't you come to the university to learn? The professors might, just might, know how to make you study better than you, yourself do. Ah, the satisfaction of a good two or three hours of uninterrupted study is hard to beat. So much different from that nagging feeling at the back of your brain "should I have gone over that Spanish?" or "maybe, I should have written my theme now!" So familiar, isn't it?

Of course, deep down inside the average coed rests the ever-burning question, "will he ask me for a date?" This is just from the female point of view as men think of nothing but football and other "sports." Marbles is really a popular game, isn't it? But the gentle sex on a college campus have many finer and more cultured things to think about. Men, men and—"oh, that man!"

Due to the war, the U of N campus is not blessed with an over abundant supply of males, but the remainder are trying their best to get around to everyone. Here's hoping they won't collapse in the effort.

Seriously, students now should be even more thankful than those of previous years that they are attending an accredited university with equal opportunities to learn and grow in mind as well as body. When we realize how close the United States came to no more freedom of speech, no more Bill of Rights, no more of everything this country has grown up on, we can thank our lucky stars that we are still a free America—of the people, by the people, and for the people.

Year Book Staff Members Leave For Minneapolis

By Beth Montgomery.

"The 1945 Cornhusker—best ever!" This was the motto of Editor Myra Colberg and Business Manager Charlotte Hill, as they left for Minneapolis and Chicago Thursday night in quest of something new in covers for the forthcoming year book.

Their train, leaving Lincoln at 6:50, should arrive in Minneapolis sometime Friday afternoon. They will spend the day at the National Student's Publication Association headquarters there looking over a collection of year books from colleges all over the U. S. in an effort to get more ideas for improvement of the Cornhusker.

See UN Play.

Saturday, they will take over the job of representing the Nebraska student body at the Nebraska-Minnesota game, which will be played in Minneapolis on that afternoon. (Editors note: Shall fate or chance be given the credit for the remarkable coincidence that they should be traveling in that "neck of the woods" at the very same time that Nebraska is playing its first game of the year?)

They will leave Minneapolis Sunday night for Chicago where they will visit the Syllabus, Northwestern University's yearbook, and talk over plans for this year's publication with the staff on that campus.

The main purpose of the whole trip is, of course, to choose the cover for the 1945 Cornhusker, and the editor and business manager are going to take considerable time in deciding. Due to the present war-time conditions, it is necessary to order these covers sooner than ever before in order to insure an adequate number of them for the Nebraska students.

Magazine Urges Coeds to Apply For Staff Jobs

Every year Mademoiselle magazine selects fourteen college coeds as members of its college board. As guests of Mademoiselle, these visiting editors spend one month in New York under the sponsorship of the magazine's own staff. Publishing the August college issue, these girls pose for pictures, model for the college clinic, and are paid for their efforts.

Would-be board members interested in writing, reporting, photography and illustration must submit to Mademoiselle a brief report spotlighting anything new on the campus; a snapshot of themselves, their college and home addresses, class year and an idea of their extracurricular activities and interests.

Being a board member means completing four assignments throughout the year which describe the activities, new courses and trends, and the general campus life of the college.

Mademoiselle awards war bonds and stamps for the best reports and pays board members for material used. The magazine also pays two dollars and a half for each snapshot that is published.

Everything submitted during the year counts toward the final selection of the staff. The most important position is that of guest editor.

Don Lentz Calls For Musicians

Don Lentz, director of the university band, has announced that he can still use bass, oboe and bassoon players. Anyone interested may contact Mr. Lentz at the school of music.

A series of Sunday concerts is planned, as well as many new variations of the traditional marching formation presented every year on the gridiron. Mr. Lentz is confident that this year's band will uphold the high standards established in years past.

T. J. Thompson Stresses State Interest in UN

Every student's duty to stimulate statewide interest in the University of Nebraska was stressed by T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs at the Interfraternity Council dinner in parlors X and Y of the Union Wednesday evening.

Outlining the postwar needs of the university, Dean Thompson said, "The support and appropriations of the state are needed for an increased faculty and new buildings." He also asked for the aid of the fraternities in promoting the academic side of the university in a higher relation to the social life.

Hymie Rosenberg, president of the Interfraternity Board of Control, also spoke at the dinner. Walter C. Henrion served as toastmaster. Sponsored by the fraternity advisers council, the dinner was held to gain a better understanding between the advisers council and the active chapters and to discuss the functions of the board of control.

More Than 300 Students Attend Vespers Service

Three hundred ten students, both men and women, attended the all-University Vesper service held at 5:00 p. m. Tuesday in parlors XYZ of the Student Union. This record is unprecedented and the All Campus Vesper Committee was very glad to welcome the interested students. In former years the services were restricted to women and were held in the parlor of Ellen Smith Hall. The XYZ room was filled to capacity. Several fellows stood outside the door but could not be persuaded to enter the already feminine-crowded room. If the services continue to draw such record crowds it will be necessary to move them to another room if an appropriate one can be found.

The All-Campus Vesper committee is proud of the success of the last meeting but hopes that the students who attended were sincere. The activity point system used by fraternities and sororities gives one point to each person who attends vespers. It is possible that the activity point system induced many students to attend and for that reason the All Campus Vesper committee requests that the Vesper services be taken off the point system.

Tassels Need One Member From Ag

There is an opening in Tassels for a barb-at-large from the Ag campus. The applicant must have sophomore standing, an average of 80 and be registered for at least twelve hours. She must also have attended the university last year.

Any barb girl on the Ag campus who can meet these requirements should file at the Ag hall in Dean Burr's office before Friday.
