Speaking on the topic, "Our Neighbors of the Caribbean," Manoah Leide-Tedesco, lecturer on international affairs, will appear at the university convocation Feb. 13 at 11 p. m. in the Union ballroom.

Brought to Lincoln in connection with the miniature peace conference, Leide-Tedesco will conduct a forum Tuesday afternoon to answer questions of the students pertaining to problems of the peace settlement. Since coming to the United States ten years ago from Europe he has traveled extensively as a lecturer and was delegated by the co-ordinator of inter-American relations as a good-will representative to Mexico and Latin America for two years.

Mr. Leide-Tedesco is now in charge of cultural programs for the Rotary Institutes of International Understanding, which position he has held since 1940. While in Europe he studied at the Universities of Naples, Prague, and Vienna, where he was associated with such eminent personalities as Weingartner, Ravel, Strauss and the late President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia.

Committee No. 3, discussing Territorial Problems of East Asia, determined the status of some of the countries in the Far East whose independence or possession is in dispute. All nations represented agreed that Korea and Siam should be given complete independence. Because the Russian representatives were not present, discussion was tabled on Manchuria and Mongolia. The disposition of French Indo-China was in dispute and will be considered at the next committee meeting.

Alsace-Lorraine.

With no discussion, Alsace-Lorraine was given by vote to France in the meeting of Committee No. 4, German borders. Representatives of the new free German government assented to this disposition of the territory. The matter of the Saar basin and Rhineland, after much discussion and differing opinions of France, Holland, Belgium and the United States, was delegated to a subcommittee. Tabled for further discussion were questions of movement of peoples, the Denmark and Flensburg area, the formation of "Guiding Principles" in making territorial decisions, the question of Heligoland and the problem of East Prussia.

Territorial problems of East Europe, Committee No. 5, were divided into five specific problems. Nine countries approved of Russia's acquisition of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania; discussion was postponed on Russia's acquisition of Bessarabia; the Polish boundary question was delegated to a sub-committee; the question of Russia's having any of East Prussia was disputed by Poland and the axis pressure group.

Committee Six.

Formation of subcommittees to work in conjunction with Committee No. 6, Territorial Problems of Central Europe and the Balkans, was the business taken up at that committee meeting. Committees to deal with the claims of Yugoslavia, the problems of Trantino and the boundary of France were appointed.

Demands of each of the countries represented on Committee No. 7, Territorial Problems of Italy, were stated at the Friday meeting. The Dodecanese islands, Dalmacia, Corsica, Istria, Trieste and Trantino were the territories discussed and each country gave its views on proper disposition of these lands.

Committee No. 8, Colonies and Mandates, delegated subcommittees to work further on the problems involved.

U. S. Leads Discussion.

The United States led the discussion of the Treatment of Germany in Committee No. 9. The representatives from the United States made a motion to be voted on and referred to a subcommittee. The motion would establish "United Nations Reparations Commissions," and any nation eligible to receive reparation would apply to the commission for specific amounts of goods to be delivered. The commission would decide whether or not such goods could be supplied in conformity with basic political principles of peace settlement and without causing injury to the economy of the world and Germany.

Much discussion on certain problems of the Treatment of Japan in Committee No. 10 was carried over for the next committee meeting. The problems of re-education of the Japanese, treatment of the Japanese emperor, and duties of the army of occupation were among those postponed.

Committee No. 11, Ethnic Problems, appointed sub-committees to do more research on certain issues of this question.

Economic and Social Questions, discussed by Committee No. 12, were referred to committees after the conference had agreed on forming a labor policy for the United Nations.
