peace conference in an interview Friday afternoon.

"I think it is a very patriotic way of showing student interest in world affairs," he stated. "If we ever have a peace settlement that lasts, it must be approved of by all the people."

In answer to questions about the question of the voting power of the security council which created much discussion, Brownell expressed the idea that the Dumbarton Oaks plan must be flexible and that is what the delegates must work for in the San Fran-

Adoption of Peace Treaty Climaxes Closing Session

Unanimous adoption of the amended peace treaty by the United Nations delegations concluded the experimental peace conference of the university Friday night.

In a session that prompted the moderator, Chief Justice Simmons of Nebraska's Supreme Court, to call the convention to order more than once, amendments were proposed and debated before the vote was taken on the treaty.

The question that caused most of the debate in the first plenary session Monday night, that of the voting power of the Security Council, was the first order of business. After Russia, speaking for the Big 5 and Greece, speaking for the small nations, both pledged acceptance of the compromise proposed by the reference committee, the proposal was written into the treaty.

Poland's Amendment.

Poland's offering of an amendment to the report of committee 5, changing the boundaries between Poland and Russia, brought on discussion which lasted for several minutes. The United States' delegate proposed an amendment which was finally accepted by the assembly as a suitable compromise.

Speeches by the Axis representatives, stating the views of the people of Japan and Germany on the peace treaty, occasioned boos from some delegations. Immediately after the Japanese representative had finished, a Chinese delegate demanded to be heard but was declared out of order by the chairman. After the German representative had spoken, the assembly requested time to discuss the preceding speeches.

Although the reference committee stated that the amendment

Schossberger Surveys Inner Europe Future

"Austria and Italy—Testing Ground for Future Europe," a lecture by Miss Emily Schossberger, university editor, was presented Wednesday night in Sosh auditorium as part of the university night-class lecture series, "International Problems Just Ahead."

Tracing the history of Italy back to the time of the Risorgimento, Miss Schossberger outlined the ideas of the statesmen of that epoch which are again the ideas and ideals of the new Italian cabinet which is struggling to achieve a measure of unity and political thought in half-liberated Italy. Miss Schossberger surveyed the history and development of fascism as a form of government and gave a vivid picture of the lives of people under that regime, drawn from her own observation.

Explaining the importance of Austria as an idea, as the mediator of different cultures in Central Europe and by its geographical position and its historic tradition, Miss Schossberger stated Austria's position in this war as the first victim of aggression after a five-year internal struggle against fifth columnists. She pointed to the Austrian underground, composed of workers, monarchists, and militant Catholics, as the only one functioning inside the Greater German Reich and expressed the hope that Austria, once liberated, will be able to constitute and retain independence in a Danubian Federation of Free and independent peoples.

She traced the parallels in the character of the peoples, who, never considering themselves a nation, but rather a conglomeration of different peoples, had developed a universalistic, super-national attitude.

UN Exceeds $2500 Red Cross Goal

The AUF Red Cross drive Saturday morning exceeded its goal of $2,500 contributed by university students to chalk up another victory of campus co-operation, according to AUF director Margaret Beede.

Red Cross Saves Lives of Former Students in Battle

With the annual Red Cross drive in full swing on the campus, authentic incidences have been called to attention concerning the work of the Red Cross in the war theaters.

Among the most recent of UN students heard from through the organization is Lt. John W. Stuart, '42, who was reported to be a prisoner of war in the Philippines in January of this year. Also heard from in a prisoner's camp in the Philippines was Capt. Neal Burr, '36.

Major Hermit Hansen, '39, contacted relatives in the states through the Red Cross, saying that he was leading a choir in a Poland prison camp.

Blood Saves Life.

One Lincoln boy lived to tell the story of laying on a Pacific beachhead for five hours before he could be evacuated. During that time, he received four blood transfusions from the Red Cross which saved his life.

Several Clubmobile units and recreation centers are being directed by former UN students. Three such workers who have written telling of their experiences are Dorothy Orcutt, stationed in Australia; Elaine Linscott, Paris; and Phyllis Boyes, with a European clubmobile unit.
