Jeness Urges Civilians' Help With Veterans

In his lecture last night entitled "The Civilian's Responsibility in Rehabilitation," Prof. Arthur F. Jenness, professor of psychology at the university said that civilians must take the lead in upholding the democratic way of life. The lecture was one of the university series designed to acquaint civilians with the problems of the returning veteran.

Professor Jenness pointed out that the soldier has lost many of his civil rights and is not used to the way of democracy, and that the welfare of the veteran depends on the welfare of all citizens.

Must Understand Veterans.

After stating that it is the duty of the civilian to understand the veteran, Prof. Jenness said, "Understanding a person involves knowing their abilities, their background, and what they are trying to do."

"The veteran must do his part in rehabilitation," he contended. "Military life has benefited some men in physique, personality and vocational skills."

In concluding his lecture, Professor Jenness suggested that civilians treat the veteran as a person, a citizen and a friend; not merely as a veteran; that they recognize the importance and cause of emotionalized attitudes and the importance of the release of feeling and acceptance of feeling; that they have faith in the ability of the veteran to handle his problems; and that they assist the veteran in discovering satisfying purposes.

University May Anticipate Larger Enrollment Assuming Study by Illinois Has Sound Basis

Using the figures computed by the University of Illinois as a basis, and assuming that there is reason for the expected increase, John K. Selleck, comptroller, indicated that the University of Nebraska can anticipate a much larger enrollment for the year of 1945-46 and enrollments which grow larger in subsequent years.

Instructions given to the faculty of the University of Illinois when their biennial budget for the year 1945-47 was being made out showed a highly tentative guide for planning expenses. According to the guide worked out by Illinois, the enrollment for the next six years will be:

1944-45	5,300
1945-46	11,000
1946-47	14,500
1947-48	16,700
1948-49	17,500
1949-50	18,000

Mr. Selleck stated that if these figures were to be believed, anyone could work out, on a percentage basis, the expected student enrollment for the university for the next five years.

Few Civilians.

The Illinois report was worked out assuming the "rock bottom" in civilian enrollment for the year 1944-45 with an increase in the second semester; a slow but steady increase of veterans in 1944-45, a larger increase in 1945-46, and a large group of veterans from 2,500 to 3,500 at the end of 1946; progressive demobilization; and larger than normal enrollment from new students.

The report also assumed the major recession of hostilities about July 1, 1945, and a substantial change toward peacetime conditions shortly thereafter.

Stating that it is almost inevitable that during the rest of the biennium the University of Illinois must continue on an accelerated program, the report gave facts which influence the curricula and general program at Illinois.

Some of the facts are: A considerable number of students will continue to elect the basic educational programs of the university; there will be an increase in the pre-war enrollment in all of the major fields; more will want a general liberal arts education; students will be interested in and partially prepared for training midway between highly technical and professional fields and strictly vocational.

A need for specific curricula in aeronautical engineering, personnel administration, industrial relations, public administration, social administration, dietetics, veterinary medicine, vocational and occupational guides, teacher education and health education was stressed in the instructions given to the Illinois faculty.

Public opinion will favor further schooling and a larger number of youth as a means of reducing unemployment, the instructions continued.

Advisory Board.

Former officers elected to the advisory board are Alice Abel, Betty Lou Houston, Edith Pumphrey and Barbara Griswold. A fifth member of the board will be appointed after the student council election, since the board must have at least one representative from the Student Council.

The four advisory board members were formerly AUF officers. Miss Abel served as head solicitor, Miss Huston as publicity manager, Miss Pumphrey as ag solicitor and Miss Griswold as town solicitor.

The AUF is in charge of all campus charity drives and during the past two years has combined the drives so that there is only one a semester. The WSSF drive, National War Fund and Nebraskans for Servicemen were included in the first semester's activities of the AUF. This semester the Red Cross drive was sponsored by the AUF.
