'45 Yearbook Carries Theme Of UN Stadium

Memorial stadium is the theme of the 1945 Cornhusker, dedicated to all Nebraskans contributing to the war effort. An outline drawing of part of the stadium appears on the padded blue-grey cloth cover of the book and one of the four corners with the inscription most fitting for the section following, appears as a background for the photographers on the division pages for each of the four major sections of the book.

Bright blue and red lettering accents are used on the cover and reappear on the division pages for the class, activities and social section, the new heroes division. The special servicemen's section includes the pictures and short write-ups of 120 university gold star men in addition to the listing of another 100 killed since December. The art work and copy of the division contrast the change and follow the transition from prewar to wartime school life.

Innovation.

Another innovation in the '45 book is inclusion of last year's commencement activities.

An unusual number of large and informal photographs appear throughout the new Cornhusker and all copy is in informal style with the usual small body type replaced by a modernistic script.

Individual pictures appear in blocks by classes rather than in groups according to colleges, as they were last year. Each class section is interspersed with informal shots of outstanding members of the group.

Each Sorority.

Each sorority has a two-page spread and six pages are devoted to the student peace conference.

Another feature of the 320 page book is a short sketch with illustrations and informal sketches about each college.

Myra Colberg is editor of the '45 Cornhusker and Alice Abel and Joyce Crosbie served as managing editors. Charlotte Hill was business manager with Marilyn Adler, Lorene Novotny and Joanne Rapp as assistants. Ed Robinson and Bill DeVriendt of the Capitol Engraving Company were in charge of photography for the book.

Newsstands Sell Spring 'Prairie Schooner' Issue

Spring issue of the Prairie Schooner, widely recognized literary quarterly sponsored by the university, is now on sale at newsstands.

Featured story is "Liesel" by Harriet Thayer, a new contributor. The tale deals with an impressionable little girl who lives in an environment of alcoholics and neurotics. Miss Thayer is also the author of "Anniversary and Other Poems."

"Ozark Folks," a group of eight blank verse poems about the people of the Ozarks, is contributed by Dennis Murphy, poet of Cape Girardeau, Missouri. Other poetry in the issue is contributed, surprisingly, by an infantry sergeant, Herbert Merrill.

Charles Angoff, managing editor of The American Mercury, is the author of "Jerry," narrative of the friendship of two small boys. Old-time firefighting in the picturesque but hardly remarkably efficient hands of the volunteer fire department forms the subject of "Clang! Clang! Clang!" by Robert S. Aldrich, UN alumnus.
