Eligible Students Vie For UN Yell Squad

Aspirants for this year's cheerleading squad will try out Saturday at 10 a. m. in the Union ballroom, Edith Pumphrey, student council president, announced today. All students, men and women, of sophomore standing or above are eligible to compete for positions. NRO trainees stationed on the campus are also eligible.

A committee of Tassel and student council representatives has been chosen as judges. This committee will determine how many cheerleaders will be chosen and set up specific rules. As usual the judges will pick one man from the squad as yell king.

Early Tryouts.
According to Miss Pumphrey, tryouts have been scheduled early in order to give the new cheering squad a chance to get into shape in time for the Oklahoma game, September 29.

Athletic director Ad Lewandowski has announced that a special section will be roped off this year for the Tassels and student body to make a unified cheering section. Gerry McKenzie, Tassel president, urges all students to sit within this section at the games.

Louis Means Accepts New Staff Post

Louis E. Means, former athletic director at Beloit College, Beloit, Wisconsin, has recently arrived to fill the newly created position of university director of student physical welfare.

As head of this department Mr. Means' duties will include establishment and maintenance of more recreational facilities, supervision of student health, and director of intramural sports.

Having served at Beloit for nine years, Director Means has had vast experience in the field of intramural and intercollegiate sports. While at Beloit he developed an extensive athletic program.

Former Coach.

Prior to Beloit, Director Means served in the capacity of both football and basketball coach in high schools throughout Wisconsin. (See MEANS, page 4)

Navy Emphasizes Liberal Education For Trainees

Registration Totals Reach 3,000 Mark

Over 3,000 students registered in the university during the three-day registration period which closed Wednesday, according to Dr. G. W. Rosenlof, registrar. Dr. Rosenlof stated that this is an increase of 33% over last year.

The registrar added that the expected increase, 10 to 15%, was much too conservative, since 3,013 students have registered to date. At this same time last year, 2,300 students were registered in the university.

Approximately one-half of those registered this year are freshmen and over 300 veterans. (See REGISTRATION, page 6)

Dean's Staff Greets Coeds At Annual Tea

University Co-eds, especially freshman, attending the annual tea given at Ellen Smith Hall Friday from 3:30 to 5:30 will be received by the Dean of Women, Mrs. Verna Boyles, Miss Elsie Ford Piper, and Miss Marjorie Johnston.

Mortar Board president Barbara Griswold, and Madeline Holtzschler, president of A. W. S. will greet the guests at the door. Assisting with the serving is (See DEAN'S STAFF, page 5)

The 186 N.R.O.T.C. trainees now stationed on the campus are not restricted to a definite course of training in naval science or any other particular field, according to Capt. M. D. Matthews, professor of Naval Science and Tactics.

Navy trainees are taking the N.R.O.T.C. course in the department of Naval Science and Tactics, a new unit of the university which was started last week. This program is actually part of the national program of the navy department to set up a training program for the procurement of officers in the peacetime navy.

The objective of the program, according to Capt. Matthews, is to provide a basic naval education together with a general liberal education. Since graduates of this program may eventually serve as line officers, engineering officers or supply officers in the navy, the emphasis upon academic subjects outside of the required naval courses will be in the general nature of the liberal arts, engineering, and business administration.

Navy students are as much a part of the university as other students, Capt. Matthews stated. They are free to participate in any campus activity and already many of them are doing so.

186 Trainees.

A total of 186 trainees was reached Thursday when eight new students arrived from sea duty to start classes. Of these 186, many have returned from combat sea duty, while others have just graduated from boot camp and others from training units.

These men are making their quarters in Navy Hall which was formerly the old library. The library has been remodeled to have all the desired facilities except those of dining, which are handled in the Union.

Captain Matthews, a veteran of both European and Pacific sea duty, is in command of the unit. (See NAVY, page 5)

First Trust Establishes Scholarships

Five scholarships, valued at $100 each, were established Wednesday by the First Trust company of Lincoln for students in the college of business administration, law and agriculture.

The first scholarships to be offered by the First Trust company with the University of Nebraska Foundation for Nebraska students' benefit, they were announced by Perry Branch, director of the Foundation.

Two From Law.

Two recipients of the scholarships will be chosen from the college of law, two from business administration and one from agricultural college the students will be nominated by the deans of the three colleges.

Prime requirement for the $100 scholarships is the achievement of a satisfactory record which will probably improve with financial assistance, and the award will be granted to sophomore or junior students in business administration and agriculture and to first or second year students in law.

Officials Announce Faculty Changes

BY BILL ROBERTS.

An unusually large number of changes in the faculty for the new year have been announced recently by administration officials.

New appointments to the faculty total 55, and these are augmented by the return of six former professors on leave last year. Four members of the faculty died during the summer and four were given leaves of absence to teach in GI universities in Europe.

Deceased are A. L. Candy, professor emeritus, T. A. Pierce, professor emeritus, Sherlock B. Gass, professor of English, and C. W. Mason of the College of Medicine. On leave in Europe are F. D. Keim of the Ag college, David Fellman, professor of political science, A. A. Luebs, professor of mechanical engineering, and D. A. Worchester, professor of psychology.

Returning from leaves of absence are professors Jiles Haney, Niles B. Barnard, C. J. Frankforter, E. B. Schmidt, Ralph Hull and T. T. Smith.

Leading the list of new appointments is Dr. Frederick K. Beutel, recently announced Dean of the Law School. Dr. Beutel did his undergraduate work at Washing-
