

Library Stocks 5,000 Books

Arrangement of newly-opened Love Library.

During the coming months, the new Love Memorial library will be stocked with five or six thousand books, to be shelved for the convenience of the student body in the reading rooms. Frank A. Lundy, university librarian, stated, "With the co-operation of the students, we will now develop the kind of library they want and need."

The new library has six spacious reading rooms, each headed by a librarian who has been especially trained for the work, and whose first concern is to help the student. The humanities reading room, which is on the north side of the second floor, houses art and music literature, English, French, German, and other languages, and the classics, including philosophy, religion, journalism, and the dramatic arts. The social studies reading room (on the north side of the third floor) will serve students interested in economics and business history and geography, political and military science, sociology, psychology, and social work.

It is hoped that soon, the science and technology reading room, on the east side of the second floor, and the education reading room, on the east side of the third floor, will be opened, but for the present, persons interested in these subjects will be helped in the humanities and social studies reading rooms, respectively.

On the west side of the third floor, the documents reading room, houses the publications of governmental bodies, and the reserve reading room, which is on the east side of the ground floor, contains books needed for class assignments.

The library opens at 7:50 a. m. Monday through Saturday, closes at 9 p. m. Monday through Thursday, at 6 p. m. Friday and at 1 p. m. on Saturday. Students are asked not to hesitate to ask for help, and their suggestions and comments will be most welcomed, according to Mr. Lundy.

GOOD lines, good fabric, good looks . . . that's what you want in a topcoat. And that's what the Sportleigh label means. We've sketched just one of our new campus collection.
