

HUSKER HIGHLIGHTS

By George Miller

Now that games with Minnesota and Indiana, two of the nation's top football aggregations, are out of the way, the Huskers will no longer be faced with the possibility of top-heavy defeats.

In fact the Nebraska team, following the experience and seasoning gained in games with two nationally rated foes, will be ready to do some winning of its own in games with Big Six opponents.

This Saturday the Huskers go to Ames to meet the disappointing Iowa State Cyclones. Mike Michalske's men have managed to win one game thus far this season after being doped in pre-season calculations to go far in the Middle West. The lone Cyclone win came over the Iowa State Teachers by a 48 to 0 count, while Northwestern and Missouri dropped the Iowans. Kansas and Iowa State duelled to a 13 to 13 deadlock in the opening Big Six game for the two schools.

As against this record, Nebraska can show three defeats. However, the quality of the opposition cannot be overlooked in comparing the two elevens, and the Huskers have undoubtedly met stronger opponents. The Minnesota and Indiana games have taught the young and untried Nebraskans a lot and they will be ready to use this experience to good advantage against future foes.

Part of the apathy on the part of the student body and the resultant decrease of school spirit may be attributed to the secret drills which have been the rule since pre-season sessions.

Now that students can take a look at the behind-the-scenes activities of the squad the interest

IM Free Throw Tournament Set For Oct. 19-26

Basketball free throw competition is the next event on the calendar of intramural athletic activities, Lou Means, intramural director announced Tuesday.

Opening play begins on Friday, October 19, and Wednesday, October 24, with each contestant shooting forty free throws on either of the days he selects. The thirty-two men with the highest scores will then be pared in match play on October 26 and the champion will be named at that time.

All men on the campus are eligible to enter, and are requested to do so. There is no limit to the number of entrants from any house or organization, the only requirement being that all entrants wear rubber-soled gym shoes while they are in action on the coliseum floor.

Contestants should report to the main floor of the coliseum and get score cards and a basketball. Three men will shoot at one basket; one man shooting, one scoring, and the third retrieving the ball. These jobs will be rotated and each man will attest the score turned in by the other two in his unit.

A trophy will be presented to the organization winning the tournament, with medals being presented to first and second place winners. Points awarded the winners will be counted toward the supremacy trophy.

in Husker grid battles should pick up considerably.

A bulletin from the Cyclone storm cellar discloses that Gene Phelps, elusive Iowa State back, suffered injuries in the Missouri game which prevent him from entering the Husker clash this Saturday. Phelps is the lad who passed and ran Nebraska dizzy last year when the Cyclones were in Lincoln.

Good news to loyal student fans is the word from coaching headquarters that university students will be admitted to tonight's scrimmage between the Reds and the Blues. Pop Klein will handle the Blues, also known as the Nubbins, and performances in this game may influence squad changes before the team leaves for Ames.

While on the subject of football spirit, why not a few contests for the blue-clad Nubbins who have been working out each night on a portion of the intramural athletic field?

Spomer Wins Golf Crown; McElliott 2nd

Team honors in the tournament, held Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13 and 14, over the Pioneers course, went to Phi Gamma Delta. The Phi Gam foursome of Ken Adams, Ernie Weir, Jack Hughes and Dwayne Tucker combined for a total score of 354 to take first place.

Phi Delta Theta grabbed second place in the team competition with a 358, while Alpha Tau Omega and Sigma Phi Epsilon placed third and fourth with 366 and 384, respectively.

Tie for Third.

Following McElliott were Phi Gam Kenny Adams of Grand Island and Sig Ep Jim Liggett of Lincoln, who tied for third with 78's. Gardner of Sigma Alpha Epsilon ended up in fifth spot with an 82.

Eleven organizations competed in the tournament, with 35 individual entries being reported. Supremacy points will be Trackmen Perform.

As an added attraction, Ed Weir's two-mile squad will hold a practice run over the regulation distance between 4:30 and 5:00 on the stadium track, so fans will receive a double reward for their presence in the stands.

Nebraska two-milers make their first start of the fall season Saturday, when they too, go to Ames to meet the Iowa State distance men. Dean Kratz, Big Six outdoor mile king, and Don Yocum, North Platte freshman, have been showing the way in early cross-country workouts.
