ling wit of one of America's best loved story tellers.

Virginia Buckingham who opened the program, read Stephen Vincent Benet's "Portrait of a Boy," the whimsical tale of a lad's wild dreams of pirates.

"Three Days Ride," another Benet ballad, which deals with the flight and death of a romantic young couple, was given by Delphine Ayers, Lexington sophomore.

The fourth student reader, Rose Marie Grow, brought Benet's "Mountain Whipporwill" to life for the students, faculty members and townspeople who attended the reading hour.

Next scheduled performance by the Experimental Theatre will be two one-act plays, to be given November 29, and the second reading hour, listed for Thursday, December 6. All of these activities will be in the studio theatre.
