Palladian Scores Again

Palladian literary society Friday night established the first lectureship fund ever to be set up on the Nebraska campus.

The establishment of the fund was another in the long line of "firsts" for this active university organization. Palladian is the oldest, the first of the university social organizations. It was begun in 1871, the first year classes were held at Nebraska, as a debating group for men. It soon expanded to include women, and the scope of its activities broadened to take in music and social affairs. Since its founding the group has been continuously active in campus extra-curricular and honorary affairs.

In 1879, Palladian started the first campus newspaper, "The Hesperian Student," which later became the Daily Nebraskan.

The new lectureship fund was set up at the 74th annual banquet of the group Friday night. A $10,000 fund will be raised this year and presented to the University Foundation in connection with the Palladian 75th anniversary celebration next fall. Annual income from the fund will be used to bring a nationally-known speaker to the campus each year for an all-university convocation.

The lectureship is an excellent idea, one which will be of unquestionable benefit to the university students. The over 2,000 active and alumni members of Palladian have made a big step in the right direction by establishing the fund.

The only thing that worries us is whether or not the administration will let us out of classes long enough to listen to the authorities brought here by the income from the fund.

We are feeling sorry for ourself because we never get in on choosing people for honors, as we always manage to arrive at voting booths a minute after closing time, or we are always overlooked when committees are chosen to pick candidates. Consequently we have decided that the best way to remedy the situation is to go right ahead and pick someone for something on our own.

Our candidates for eligible bachelor:

1. It was a great problem deciding between two for our first candidate. One has flirty eyes and wavy hair; the other has flirty eyes and less hair. One coaches the Nubbins football squad; the other coaches anyone who'll listen to him. One has a beautiful build when he keeps the bulk of his weight in his chest instead of at his diaphragm; the other has a diaphragm which is built into his chest beautifully (take that stuff away!) One is a returned veteran of foreign wars; the other is a returned veteran of wars which are foreign.

Anyway, we chose the latter, "Captain Eddy," because Jerry Kathol is married. (Oh, the guy's last name is Schwartzkopf.)

2. After eliminating Mac' Robinson—no minors allowed—the next candidate selected was Ellsworth DuTeau. Ellsworth threatened to blackmail us yesterday for misrepresentation of the facts in our article in that pulp pamphlet The Awgwan. We wondered how he picked out these misrepresented facts from among the others, but anyway we admit we don't really hate men—you can put that club down now Ellsworth!

3. The next candidate on our list—barring Al Liedel for indiscriminate holding of hands with the Pep Queen—is Robert D. Keckler, guaranteed good for any Physics problem which can't be thrust unobtrusively into the nearest waste basket. Now there's a truly eligible bachelor for you!

4. As Mayno Williams is engaged or pinned or in love or something we racked our brains for the next best prospect and decided on JORGE TEARNIE CHESTACK (any misspelling of names is purely coincidental and due to the fact that these names probably do not appear in print enough for us to become accustomed to them).

We sincerely wish there were some other male on The Awgwan whom we could enter as an eligible bachelor, but the other two haven't time for any pursuits less cultural than intricate studies of "Why the fraternity system is abhorrent, loathful, nauseating and extremely gregarious."

5 and 6. We are holding up fifth and sixth places for eligible bachelor until two highfalutin, rootin'-tootin' sons of guns from You-name-it return to campus next semester after a two year leave of absence, during which time they jaunted about the world carving "UN" and hearts on oak trees in Germany. These two fellows (along with about one thousand other veterans who according to a "completely unfounded rumor" are enrolling at Nebraska next semester) are undoubtedly joining their comrades in sweating out a discharge in time for the January session. They have names, too—Joe Partington and Bobby Gillespie. UN, here we come!

Sears-Roebuck Foundation Gives Six Scholarships

Awarding six $200 scholarships, the scholarship committee of the home ec department today announced the recipients of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation awards.

Winners of this year's scholarships are: Jane Barker, Vivian Frasier, Amy Jean Mitchell, Mavis Musgrave, Helen Schrader and Ruth Swanson.

Basis of Awards.

The Sears-Roebuck scholarships are granted on the basis of academic achievement, financial need and professional promise. Awards are designed to aid outstanding students in their first year of college work. This year's winners are all graduates of Nebraska high schools and Miss Barker and Miss Mitchell have previously received Regents scholarships.

Bulletin . . .

All U. S. A. council representatives are to meet in the visual education department room in the west stadium at 12:30 noon Tuesday, to have a group picture taken for the Cornhusker.

All members of the ag Y. W. C. A. will be recognized at a special candlelight service Tuesday at 7:00 p. m., at First Evangelical church at 33rd and Starr, according to Lois Oppen, Y. W. president.

Gerry Gowan, who is in charge of the program, announced that the service will be over by 7:30 enabling the group to go to their regular meetings.

All coeds that would be interested in taking a First Aid class at Ag college, if such a course were offered, are asked to sign their names to a special list on the bulletin board in the home ec building.

Sponsored by the home ec club, arrangements will be made to obtain an instructor if enough women are interested, according to Evelyn Mumma, chairman of the project. The class would be held on Saturday mornings from 9 to 12.

Ag Mass Meeting

Ag YW and home ec mass meeting will be held Tuesday at 4:45 p. m. in the social rooms, Ag college. Miss Bess Steele, art instructor in the home economics department, will talk on her trip to Mexico and explain her display being shown in the social rooms.
