

Sooner Cage Hopes Aided By Lettermen

NORMAN, Okla., Dec. 1.—Oklahoma's Roundball Runts learned last season that no matter how smartly a small team maneuvers, a rebound is still important in basketball and tall guys shag by far the most of them.

Consequently Coach Bruce Drake is doing lots of hard work these days with taller boys on his Sooner squad, fellows like Doug Lynn, 6-foot 8-inch freshman from Henryetta high school, Paul Courty, 6-foot 3-inch navy dischargee who subbed last year for the Norman Navy Skyjackets, Tom Wheeler, 6-foot 4-inch freshman from Oklahoma City Foster high school and Burrell Lewis, 6-foot 2-inch freshman from Tulsa Central high school.

Oklahoma returns most of her diminutive lettermen who won half their Big Six Conference games last year and tied for third in the league race. Obviously, they won't rise any higher this season against opponents who are rapidly returning to peacetime strength with the return of experienced players who have been away to war.

So far, Oklahoma hasn't gained from the hordes of returning war veterans a single letterman in either football or basketball.

The nine lettermen back from Oklahoma's Lilliputians of last year are Jack Landon, all-Big Six Conference guard of last year, Harold "Scooter" Hines, Bill Whaley, Howard Brinegar, Don Buelow, Lemont Eltinge, Don Krouse, Ed Lindenberg and Winston Potts. Can they go against the stars of 1942, back for more schooling and more basketball after three years of fighting overseas?
