

Sooners Top Husker Cage Quint, 51-44

Inaccuracy at the free throw line cost the Nebraska basketball team an upset victory over the Oklahoma Sooners Monday night at the coliseum, for the Huskers outscored the visitors from the field, but lost a 51-44 contest to Bruce Drake's hustling quintet.

The Cornhuskers came to life with a roar late in the first half, and wiped out a 15 to 4 Oklahoma lead. As the half ended Pop Klein's crew was trailing by one point, 22 to 21.

With five minutes left in the game, a conference affair, the Huskers were behind, 36-34, but the more experienced Sooners, led by all-conference guard, Jack Landon, pulled away, using their free throw prowess to secure their margin of victory.

Don Buelow and Bill Whaley cashed in on charity tosses late in the game, as the over-anxious Huskers, fighting to get possession of the ball, committed numerous fouls.

Gayle Lebsack led the Nebraska scorers with eight points, all coming on long one hand set shots. Lithe Don Barry gave the Sooners plenty of trouble under both baskets, while Bob Korte came through with needed points in the second half to keep the Scarlet cagers in contention.

Courty Paces Sooners.

The Huskers potted 17 field goals to 16 for the Sooners, but the visitors cashed in on 19 of 30 free throws to keep their Big Six championship hopes alive. Nebraska cagers connected with only 10 of 26 charity tosses, and watched their victory hopes go glimmering when the southern invaders added to their narrow lead late in
