What value is the Nebraska Art Association exhibition to the university student? Upon watching the reactions of particular -students or groups of students to certain works in the show one comes to realize that there are several different types of values obtained.

The exhibition's value to art students is probably the most exextensive and noticeable of all. To study examples of the fundamental methods and techniques of artistic expression they have been working with is of special educational value to them.

Foreign Art. inclusion of European works in the exhibition this year offers a new opportunity in seeing the relation of the works of addition, the exhibition brings forth special lectures and calls noted art authorities from this year, according to Barbara near and far to speak about and discuss the works in the show. These lectures have something to give both the art student and those of other major interests since the speakers admost always relate their discussion of the art world to the world in general.

Student Advantage.

University students are at a particular advantage to get a great deal out of the exhibition for they can visit the galleries frequently. It is by continual browsing thru the exhibition and studying of the works that one can obtain most value from the show.

It seems to me that to students as a whole the exhibition is of See ART, Page 4.

Dr. F. Hoover Discusses Vet Accreditation

Dr. Floyd W. Hoover, university assistant director of admissions, stated that universities and colleges render veterans a "great disservice" by granting easy admission and "indiscriminate credits" for service experiences when he spoke before a meeting of the Hastings College Faculty Friday on the problem of accrediting veterans.

"Many young men who spent years normally devoted to college, in the armed forces, are convinced a college degree is the only way to make up for time lost they might have otherwise gained in civilian experience. The GI Bill of Rights crystalized this feeling and today colleges and universities are being flooded with admission requests from thousands of veterans," Dr. Hoover emphasized.

Fair Break.

While this may be a desirable and commendable development, the institutions owe it to the people of Nebraska who support them, and to the prestige of the degrees they grant, to give the veteran a fair break by making him earn his degree instead of handing it to him on a silver platter, according to Dr. Hoover. He added, "many veterans at the university have told us they don't want a 'spoon fed degree.'"

Proper evaluation of a veteran's knowledge can be accurately determined by standardized guidance examinations, Dr. Hoover
