

HUSKER HIGHLIGHTS

By George Miller

With the spring sports season nearing a close, the Nebraska athletic plant will be the scene of two championship track meets in the near future. This weekend the Nebraska high school track and field performers will take over the Memorial stadium cinders for their annual championships in four classes.

Next week, on May 18 and possibly May 17, the Big Six outdoor championships will get under way. Present plans call for preliminaries Saturday morning, but the schedule may be altered to allow prelims on Friday afternoon. The high jump, pole vault, mile, two mile and the mile relay are the only events in which no preliminary competition will be held.

Lincoln will also be the scene of the Big Six golf championships in both team and individual play on the same days that the track and field athletes perform. Golf is the only other sport in which the conference will officially recognize a champion, for tennis and baseball rivalry have been on an informal basis even though all of the loop-members have fielded teams.

In conjunction with the Big Six championships the conference faculty representatives, athletic directors, football coaches, business managers, basketball coaches, track coaches and coaches in other sports will hold meetings Thursday, May 16 at the Cornhusker hotel. The delegates will reconvene on Friday morning for a continuation of the Thursday sessions.

Scarlet baseball and tennis teams will take part in the annual Iowa State Veishea program this weekend when they journey to Ames for games with the Cyclones in these sports. Several thousand visitors are expected to throng to the IS campus for the celebration, an all-college open house.

The Husker baseballers did the Cyclones a good turn when Coach Frank Smagacz's crew hung a 7-5 defeat on the Kansas Jayhawks Monday afternoon. The Kansas loss enabled the Iowa State club to hold onto second place in unofficial conference standings, behind the Oklahoma Sooners who have concluded competition.

It seems that the Nebraska baseball team cannot be happy with a won-lost average of .500. As soon as they achieve any mark above the 50-50 standard the Huskers seemingly drop to pieces.

Nebraska won two games from Colorado to open the season, then lost a pair to Minnesota by decisive margins. After battling the rest of April to get back to the right side of the ledger Coach Frank Smagacz's team had a chance to move into the higher percentage bracket, but instead, absorbed an 18-3 shellacking from the Kansas Jayhawks.

Fans who saw the KU game got quite a laugh because of the antics of Irv Hayden, roly-poly Jayhawk player who played first base Monday and appeared in right field Tuesday. However, Hayden showed why he was in action, for Monday he smashed a triple which would have been a home run for anyone a bit fleet on the base paths, and Tuesday he clubbed four hits in five times at bat. Included in his May 7 showing was another triple and a home run.

The only encouragement Husker followers could derive from Tuesday's game was the showing of Fritz Hedgwood who got two bingles in three times at bat. A former Omaha North athlete, Hedgwood had not been in the starting lineup until ineligibility removed outfielder Frank Brown from the squad and forced Coach Smagacz to juggle his starters.

winners will be allowed to wear spikes for a second trial in the event in which they excel.

The deadline for all entries is May 13. A team trophy will be awarded to the first place team, and a medal goes to the individual high scorer. Every first place winner will receive a certificate of achievement.

No man may enter more than four events, but each organization must have at least five competitors to qualify for participation points.
