An Explanation . . .

Because of the number of misguided rumors which have been circulating about the campus concerning staff reporters and workers on the three student publications—The Daily Nebraskan, Cornhusker and Awgwan—we take this opportunity to clarify said positions and to state their relation to the student body.

All three are student publications, and as such, are to be operated by the students themselves with the help of a faculty advisor. A Publications Board, composed of students and faculty members, is then established to handle administrative matters and to select the staffs through application.

Contrary to public opinion, the publications in question do not restrict staff positions to journalism students. Any student, regardless of the college course he is pursuing, has the opportunity and right to apply for staff positions on any of the three publications.

This policy is followed in an effort to obtain any and all students interested in publication work, keeping in mind that in this way the respective staffs will include those most interested in newspaper, yearbook or magazine work.

Many arguments have originated from the above statement, and after thoroughly covering the pros and cons, the "powers that be" thought it advisable to place the publications on their own.

One of the main advantages to the plan is in giving all departments on the campus an equal chance at staff representation.

So knowing the editor, having an "in" with the Pub Board or being a journalism major doesn't mean a great deal. A little skill, more knowledge, and a lot of patience goes much farther.

Codliver Lunch Slays Bossie Hall Freshman

BY WALLY BECKER.

Bossie Hall dozed fitfully in the midday heat, flicked her auditorium at an upstart bulldozer near her flank, then stirred and grudgingly rose to her feet as irritating colonies of students swarmed over and down her steaming flanks.

It was noon. Even Axel Smorgasbord, freshman, knew it was noon, by jimminy. Professor and class, kit and kaboodle, Miller & Paine had all just left in a body (by Fisher, Axel shrewdly deduced as the flashy chrome and maroon Buick convertible pulled away). Besides, the strikingly beautiful, remarkably handsome, 17 bevel concrete sun-dial on his wrist (valedictorian gift of Gustavus Adolphus high) indicated 11:45 a. m.

Motherly Love.

"Give me five minutes more," Axel hummed briskly in a rich coloratura as his bronzed, work-hardened fingers tore eagerly at the strings binding the three-inch-lead-walled (radioactive proof, that is, lunch box a loving housemother had thoughtfully tucked into his Psychology And Life, Revised.

Yes, there they all were. Individually wrapped in linoleum and tied with fetching bergundy-and-blue crinoline bows (sweet old house mums) reposed the sandwiches.

"A body's got to have proper nourishment," the dear old body always said. "We'll put some flesh on those skinny ol' ribs, just you see!" She would cackle, scurrying around the kitchen, dusting a floury hand on her apron and making like Aunt Jenny.

Good Stuff.

"Jeepers!" Axel cried, "Just what I wanted—tripe, limburger and peach marmalade on rye!" "Goody!" Axel shilled, biting into a deviled egg, peanut butter and maraschino cherry delight. "Yummy!" Axel yelped, clamping down on a wild honey and sauerkraut between rye-krisp. "Why is sweet, petite housemums so good to me?" Axel mused as he sampled a succulent eggplant on wilted lettuce, fried eggplant, broiled eggplant, grilled eggplant, toasted eggplant eggplant preserves and a tasty eggplant éclair. "Such mouth-watering variety, too," he added.

Beginning.

But that was just the beginning. There were french-fried oysters, creamed cauliflower with just a dash of paprika, ice-cold ravioli, seared toadstools, hominy grits with tobasco sauce, last Tuesday's fried mush, Quaker puffed rice sparkies and catsup, thick, juicy pork chops covered with peanut butter, cabbage in tomato aspic salad, steamed rutabagas, and mung soufflé.

"Lovable old housemums," he chortled, gobbling the cake (marble), the ice cream (brick) and washing everything down with a frothy mug of cod liver oil.

They found him later when Dr. Whitney stumbled across his inert form in 2BH.

Housemums they took away booked on suspicion of murder, but before the crime doctor and Inspector Ross, who had been called in on the case could warn her anything she said might be held against her housemums (Mother Bleu, in case you're interested) blurted out impetuously, "I just got too — careless."

ment of the group program for the year. The Lincoln pastors will be introduced, and their wives will serve refreshments.

HOW NEBRASKAN STAFF MEMBERS PICK 'EM.

Duke Novotny — Nebraska. Minnesota revolt in the ranks last season may prove to be evident again with a variety of former stars on the roster. Could be Nebraska but history certainly favors the Gophers. I'll ride with the Huskers by 7 points.

Jim Van Landingham—Nebraska. I pick Nebraska. Minnesota will find that our line has more strength in it than figures show. The difference will be in the speed in our backfield.

M. A. Caswood—Nebraska. Just home state loyalty.

Jack Hill—Nebraska. A toss up with the nod to Nebraska. Both squads are unknown quantities, but the combination of Masterson know-how and Husker fight may do the trick.

Pat Gilligan—Minnesota. By one touchdown, but the Nebraska team will give them a few bad moments.

George Miller—See Husker Highlights.

Phoe Mortlock — Nebraska! Who else?

based on the invitation of Jesus to Peter: "Follow Me."

King Confusion Rules On Revived Campus

BY DEDE MEYER.

Simplicity is certainly not the key-word on this campus. Instead, King Confusion reigns.

After the first week of classes, any student who has stamina enough to exert himself is purely immortal. The book situation alone is sufficient to use up a bottle of Alka Seltzer and several boxes of Bayer's best. Some system should be devised, whereby a student need not stand in line for a solid hour to find that the book he wants won't be in till next week.

And registration, in the coliseum, disguised as a concentration camp, is a fit initiation to any college year.

Lost Soul.

Take the auditorium in Sosh, for example. The bell rings, and anyone weighing under two hundred, is a lost soul. As approximately 175 students frantically push their way out of the class, approximately 175 students just as frantically push their way in. Perhaps what follows is the answer to the old riddle of the irresistible force meeting the immovable object. Isn't there some system by which departing students could slip out of the back doors, while entering students could trip, merrily and unmolested, into the front?

Of course the fact that my adviser put me in five wrong classes, is purely coincidental.

Activities Muddled.

And then there are these blood-sucking organizations, the campus activities, which are now, in the midst of all this muddle, attempting to organize, sell tickets, advertise, get into print, and in other ways generally molest the public at large. They run explicitly on the policy of participants-live-eat-sleep-breathe-and-die-for-the-o-rganization. It is inconceivable to them that students may have more than one iron in the fire.

But really, King Confusion is a delightful monarch, and without him, Nebraska U just wouldn't be Nebraska U. So take a deep breath, everybody. We're off on another year, and it looks like it's going to be a lulu!

X-ray Progress 'Satisfactory', Asserts Means

"Very satisfactory progress" with the student chest X-ray program being conducted by the state health department's X-ray unit has been reported by L. E. Means, director of the student health service.

The unit, which is stationed at the rear of the pharmacy building, is operating from 9 a. m. to noon and from 1 p. m. to 4 p. m., and is handling from 60 to 75 students each hour.

X-Rays Required.

The health service requests that all students who have not appeared at their scheduled time, call immediately at the office and receive another appointment card. This will eliminate much extra work and expense in tracing down each student who must take a chest X-ray before his enrollment in the university is complete, according to health service officials.

Students who do not take X-rays by Oct. 19, must then pay their own costs, while the present program is free and a part of their student health service privileges.

Saturday morning from 9 to 12 is reserved for faculty, faculty wives and children, and university employees. They need no appointment card, but are to report at their convenience during these hours.

Picture Schedules

The following houses have been scheduled for pictures at the Reinhardt-Marsden Studio on the fifth floor at Gold's. Appointments must be made and kept.

Sept. 30-Oct. 5—Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Pi.

Oct. 7-12—Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta. Unaffiliated students must make appointments Thursday or Friday at the Cornhusker office to have pictures taken Sept. 30 through Oct. 5, according to Dean Skokan, business manager.

Off The Record

BY JERRY COHN

I now declare this "Buy Your Favorite Record Week." Both RCA-Victor and Capitol recording outfits have announced a retail price increase of 10 cents a platter, to take effect shortly. As a result of this catastrophe, we are forced to review only Columbia records, still selling for 53 cents.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Record division has signed those real characters, The Slim Gaillard Quartette, as well as Kate Smith, Ziggy Elman, Johnnie Johnson, and Rudy Vallee. Now the question arises, when are they going to release their wares?

Lincoln will be pulling a good share of the "name bands" during the next few months. The Wizard of the Clarinet, Jerry Wald, plays the Turnpike tonight, on his way to the Hollywood Paldium. On Oct. 25, the King of Swing, Benny Goodman, takes the spotlight. BG and his orchestra are starred on the Victor Borge program. If you are in the mood for a swing concert, drop by the coliseum Oct. 28, when that Sentimental Gentleman of Swing, Tommy Dorsey, brings a 35-piece outfit to Lincoln.

The Orpheum in Omaha is featuring Count Basie and his Ork this week. The Count's latest Columbia waxing is "Blue Skies" and "The King." Drummer Jo Jones leads the rhythm section on "Skies," but the tempo varies. "The King," dedicated to Benny Goodman, is a fast jump tune with good solos all the way through. The Count is headed for California for some movie shorts.

Everyone is singing the new "pop" song, "Dingbat, The Singing Cat," and few of them know that it is really taken from the opera, "Peter and The Wolf."

PICK UP CORNHUSKERS

There are several '45 and '46 copies of the Cornhusker which have not been claimed by the students who bought them. These books must be picked up at the Cornhusker offices in the Student Union before Oct. 1 or they will be sold, according to Dean Skokan, Cornhusker business manager.
