Palladians Hold Weekly Confab Friday

The Palladian Literary Society held its weekly social meeting on Friday evening. Jose Ferrara of Argentina, a graduate student at the Ag college, was the guest speaker.
 Mr. Ferrara spoke to the group informally on the topic of college education in his native country. Many differences between the college system in this country and Argentina were vividly pointed out. In that South American country all universities, of which there are six, are controlled by the national government.
 Schools in Argentina do not have a system of degrees; every course has a set number of years for completion. Under such a system one either satisfactorily completes the course or he has no claim to any accomplishment.
 Before and after the talk the meeting was devoted to recreational activities, as is the customary procedure for Friday meetings of the Palladian Society. Business meetings of the group are held on Monday evenings.
 It was announced by President Mildred Brewer that three new pledges, Zeta Brown, Chirley Cane and John McCorkle, were accepted at the last meeting. New pledges will also be taken in as the year progresses, according to the custom of the organization.
