Lost?

Where's your sense of humor?

I thought we had this all settled, but seems I was wrong, again! The great American sense of humor evidently got lost in the shuffle, as evidenced by the complete lack of understanding on the part of some students who claim a normal amount of intelligence.

So the Republicans did sweep the country. Some of us are happy and some of us sad. And since it was rather an unusual occurrence, let those who will have their fun. It certainly can't do any harm, and it might do a great deal of good. It's been a long time since the Republicans had a chance to be the brunt of any offensive discussion. Let the rains come!

Since a university is the proving ground for countless things, let us say it is a place to develop some of that invaluable "give and take" spirit. To be able to take things seriously, yourself included, is a very fine thing. But there are times when it is to everyone's advantage to look at the lighter side of a question. It's very relaxing. Try it some time!

It all boils down to the fact that it's pretty sad when two political parties, symbol of a democracy, start slashing each others throats through fair means or foul. After all, one party had to have a majority.

This freedom we have now is a valuable asset. May we maintain the integrity of this freedom by using it wisely. This goes for all of us. And may the day never arrive when we become so stilted and unimaginative as to lose all semblance of humor in its finest sense.
