Student Federalist Head Tours Nation

Traveling more than 5,000 miles in the past two months, Colgate Prentice, 22 year old national president of Student Federalists Inc., has spread the student group's doctrines in almost half of the nation's 48 states.

After his release from the Army Air forces a year ago, Prentice met Harris Wofford, originator of Student Federalists and a former national president. The two student leaders met at Smith college, when Wofford left Prentice had become a convert to the theory of federalism.

Newcomer.

A newcomer to national student affairs, Colgate served as executive chairman of Swarthmore's AVC chapter and organized the local chapter there. His election to the national presidency is now taking him on a cross country tour ending on the west coast. After his three day stopover in Nebraska, Colgate plans on going directly to California and the universities of Southern California, San Francisco and Berkeley.

When asked the reasons for taking such an active interest in student affairs, Prentice said, "It seems that the youth of America definitely need an ideal and a goal to counter-act the fatalistic philosophy which seems to be taking hold of society."

Background.

In the way of background material on the personable young Federalist, Colgate told The Daily Nebraskan that he comes from Williamsburg, Virginia, was a junior majoring in political science at Swarthmore college and plans on continuing his present activities in national affairs.

Prentice admitted that he had his eyes on a position with the State Department and that he would try to avoid politics in the belief that such connections would tie him down.

During the war, he served as central fire control officer with the 20th air force on B-29's for 19 missions and was stationed at the Lincoln Army Air Field for five months. Admitting with a wry smile that while Nebraska was all right, he just didn't care for the army.

An experienced public speaker and debator, the young Virginian has about seven months to serve as the national president of the Student Federalists and he then plans on returning to his studies at Swarthmore.

French Society Names Heads Of Committees

Le Cercle Francais held its second meeting Monday at 4 p. m. in room 315 of the Union. Two hundred views of France were displayed in the room decorations, which carried out a French landmarks theme.

President Robert Johnson presided at the meeting at which the following heads of committees were appointed: Duane Adams, Constitution committee, Mildred Patterson, decorations committee, and Frances Forster, publicity committee.

The main theme of the meeting was French popular music. Recordings were played of "J'attendrai," "J'ai ta main," "Y a de la joie," "Melancolie," and "Après toi je n'aurai plus d'amour." Members joined in on the second chorus, singing from mimeographed sheets. Refreshments were served at the meeting.

"Thanksgiving vacation?" was an incredulous question.

"Why, yes," he said, looking suddenly frightened. "Is there something wrong with that?"

"No, but there's something wrong with you!" was the reply, as two men came around the street corner and caught hold of Marski.

"We're from the institution," they said. "This man has been giving us a lot of trouble. Has he bothered any of you?"

I was able to say quite sincerely, "Yes, he has given me quite a blow."

Turnpike Tells House Winners On Radio Show

The sorority, fraternity, or co-op house winning free admission to the Turnpike will be announced over KFOR on the radio program broadcast from the Pike's ballroom.

Following a plan recently introduced by the Pike, each week a name will be drawn from a pool of all fraternities, sororities, and organized houses represented on the campus. Every member of the house winning the lottery will be admitted to the Pike free of charge.

Last week, the Alpha Xi Deltas won the first drawing and danced to the music of George Winslow "for free."

Nu Med Dinner Features Talk By Psychiatrist

As stated in the November 24 issue of The Daily Nebraskan, a new procedure for banquet attendance has been invoked. Any Nu-Med member planning to attend the banquet is to place his name and 50 cents in an envelope in Dr. Otis Wade's office, 308 Bessey Hall, before Thanksgiving vacation.

"Any member, of course, unable to attend the banquet is welcome to come in for the business meeting and speaker, at 7:15 p. m.," Johnson said.
