

Ragged Edges

By Ellie Swanson.

As far as I can figure out the only thing most people are going to do over vacation is eat, sleep and study . . . at least that's what they say now. There are, however, a few celebrations that should prove to be interesting.

Starting the festivities off with a bang are a group of Omaha ex-high school buddies. The party will take place at Bud Hoffman's home Wednesday evening. Sandy Crawford will be with Amy Je Bergh, John Kruse with Nancy Watkins, Normie Williams with Joanie Vingers and Si Markeson with Bobbie Busch. The same group will get together Saturday night at Bill Condon's for a duck dinner. Bill Condon will court Tish Gardiner, Al Thompson and Sal Stuht, and Joanie Vingers will change to Bill Bock.

Before we get carried away with Thanksgiving plans, there are a few new bits of news as yet untold. Paula Jones is, as of Saturday night, pinned to Bud Wehman. Another pinning is that of Shirley Campbell and Harlow Standage. Passing the candy Monday night were Mary Belle O'Halloran and Rex Boyd who have been pinned for some time and have now announced their engagement.

Gamma Phis to Celebrate.

The Gamma Phis will have a big celebration also in Omaha Saturday night. The place is Peony Park and a few of the couples are Pat Toof and Jack Clow, and Mary Kupfing with Bill Folger.

There are a few more steadies to be added to the now long list. Jody Wolcott and Fred Schroeder have made some strange steady agreement which only they understand. Meredith Bowhay and Al Casey, it is rumored, have also called it steady. Also, in spite of talk to the contrary, Dick Kuhl and Jo Srb are not pinned, but they are going steady. He will, by the way, visit her in Omaha over the holidays.

Fahrlander Contests Decision.

One amusing story of late is that John Fahrlander is contesting the decision of the judges for last place in the turkey race. John, it seems, crossed the finish line at 8:20 on the evening of the race and was disappointed that everyone had gone home.

One of the more interesting trips of the vacation will be taken by Ralph Sears and Bill Frantz who will be off Wednesday to ski in Estes Park. Also looking forward to a good time is Norm Leger who is leaving for Chicago to visit famous brother Russ, who now has his own radio program.

Of interest to the local boys may be the fact that Dono Lee Brugh receives numerous calls every evening from York and she is now completely dated up for the holidays. Baarb Radcliff will spend her time in Columbus with Steve James who is flying down today.

Is It True.

Just to prove that some people expect to find something to do in Council Bluffs, Bee Smith will have as her guests, Barb Cypremon, Bob Reidy and Howie Esser.

That just about covers most of the holiday plans. As for the rest of you, I hope you all have a happy vacation eating, sleeping and studying.

Kilroy Nichts But Sosh Tests Yah! Ich Bewildered

By Glenn Rackley

"Where is Kilroy when he isn't here?"

I felt certain I would learn the answer to that one this morning as my "forward progress" (apologies to Lyle Bremser), was suddenly checked at the R street entrance to Sosh.

Jackson's Stone Wall?

Like a solid wall they stood there, that eager group of students who unrelentingly pressed toward the west corner of the hall, and who held back the incoming students as effectively as the Notre Dame line held Army.

"Is Kilroy here?" I asked the big guy who was trying to climb up on my shoulders.

"Naw," he replied apprehensively, "the poli sci test papers are back."

Palestine Problem Debated By Four Panel Speakers

At an All University Forum held last night in the Union, the controversial issue of Jewish immigration into Palestine and the formation of a Jewish national state was discussed by Maurine Evnen, teachers college senior, Abou Sabe, an Egyptian Arab and graduate student in the college of agricultural engineering, F. H. Henzlik, Dean of teachers college, Paul Bogan, instructor of radio in the speech department. Ted Sorenson acted as moderator.

Miss Evnen brought up the problem of the displaced persons scattered throughout Europe, and pointed out that these people who are physically, mentally, and spiritually ill can not be sent back to their original homes because of their desire to live in a land of their own customs and culture.

Arabian Viewpoint.

Abou Sabe expressed the point of view of the Arabian people who do not wish to be forced against their will to relinquish the land to immigrants. He stated that Palestine was the homeland for Christian and Moslem religions as well as for the Jewish religion. He contended that Palestine should share its part of the burden of providing the displaced Jews with homes, but other nations too must open their doors to the immigrants. "Let's help together, instead of giving all to Palestine," he said.

Dean Henzlik declared that the Jews not only have a moral right to make Palestine their homeland, but also a legal right in view of the commitments made by the League of Nations in 1917, and those made by the U. S. Congress in 1922 and 1924. "If we don't live up to our promises, if they come to mean nothing, then we are endangering our own freedom," he stated.

Speaking against the formation of a Jewish state, Mr. Bogan said, "If peace is to be attained, all national barriers must be overcome. The solution is not in the building of a group based on nationalistic lines." He stressed the importance of providing homes for all displaced persons, regardless of nationality or religion.
