

Color Supplies Space-Effect To Apartments

Mrs. Jess Alexander, who teaches a course in interior decoration at Kansas State college, recently offered some suggestions for wives of students who must turn roughly finished cellars into homes.

"Color is the keynote," she says. "If your apartment is dark and cramped, one may get the feeling of space and light by using pale yellow on the walls and by avoiding use of large flower designs in the draperies and furniture coverings."

Slip covers and drapes of stripes, checks, and plaids are best in this case, but Mrs. Alexander points out that too much pattern of any kind tends to cramp the atmosphere. She added that it is well to remember that the more simple the furnishings the more expensive they appear.

Food Too!

If cooking is done in one end of the apartment, Mrs. Alexander suggests that drapes or screens should cover this end while it is not in use. She points out, though, that the drapes should be the same color as the walls, and that the screen should be painted with paint identical to the walls.

Bare floors are more attractive than those covered by numerous scatter rugs, she says. Large rugs are very expensive but a cheaper version may be made by sewing together four bathroom-size shaggy rugs.

The books which clutter many student apartments may be placed in attractively painted orange crates that will also serve as end-tables. Mrs. Alexander suggests that any piece of furniture that can be made to do double duty should be used. If trunks must be kept in the room, they can be padded, slip covered and used for window-seats.

Federalists Will Discuss UNO Tonight

The United Nations organization will be the topic of discussion at the Student Federalist meeting tonight at 7 o'clock in room 202 Sosh. The meeting will be open to all interested students and faculty members.

Before the discussion is open to the floor, a discussion will introduce the structure of the U N and outline the procedure of action.

The various accomplishments and failings, as well as the U N's future possibilities will be discussed. By such a discussion the Student Federalists hope to be able to completely understand the organization of the U. N. and decide whether the organization is capable of maintaining world peace.

Following the discussion, the meeting will be devoted to business matters. Final preparations for the combined meeting of the Student Federalists and Unitarian Youth to be held Sunday night, will be made.
